Resolutions read and adopted at the Annual Meeting of the National League at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York City, December 14, 1915.

RESOLVED, That the officers and members of the National League of Professional Base Ball Clubs, and all kindred organizations connected and allied with the National Game, have suffered an irreparable loss in the death of one of base ball's pioneers and commanding figures, a former president of the Chicago club and an honorary life member of the National League,

Albert Goodwill Spalding

RESOLVED, That, when on September 9, 1915, he was removed suddenly from a field of earnest activity, the National Game was bereft of its heroic figure, the "Father and Savior of Base Ball" and the "Greatest Builder" in Base Ball, that the National League lost the inspiring leader among those men who took the first steps toward its organization;

RESOLVED, That he was in many respects the greatest man the National Game has produced, superlatively great as the first and greatest missionary and propagandist the game ever had, that he carved his name large and indelibly in the history of the game, which is his monument as long as the sport survives;

Player, Manager, Owner, Councilor,

RESOLVED, That the National League will ever continue to cherish his constructive genius and executive ability and respect his memory for its recollections of a kind, genial, sympathetic nature; to admire his rugged integrity, severe honesty and ethical business methods; and that as a further mark of esteem and honor these resolutions be made a part of this league's record and that an engrossed copy be sent to his family.

Introduction

In this issue of the BASE BALL RECORD the editor and the publishers believe that they have succeeded in putting together the Base Ball statistics of the United States with better arrangement and in more comprehensive manner than in any publication of the past since there has been a national game. It is quite needless to say that the editor of the BASE BALL RECORD has each year urged its readers to forward to him notification of any errors which may have been discovered. There is nothing that can equal close scanning on the part of thousands of eyes as against two. Year following year, the editor has made corrections and in the spring of 1915 everything looked more promising for a perfect RECORD than in any year of this book's so well appreciated history. As luck would have it, one or two pages of the miscellaneous data happened to get to press without correction of the proof. Every printer and every editor knows how possible that is. So some of the former errors of which there was knowledge, and which had been corrected in manuscript, did not happen to be corrected in the publication and once again the attention of the editor was called to the fact that they were "still there."

It is better to know that the corrections had been made in some manner than not to know that the errors existed. Hence there is much congratulation on the progress that is being made to get all Base Ball data as accurate as human intelligence can make it. It is doubtful whether all of the readers of the BASE BALL RECORD really know the gigantic task which confronted the publication department of the firm of A. G. Spalding & Bros. when it was decided to put forth an annual Record Book.

The research which it has taken to verify one single date frequently has taken the greater part of a week. In not a few cases what had been considered to be facts were found to be nothing but romances. Not infrequently because a Base Ball "say so" had passed from mouth to mouth for ten or fifteen years it was accepted to be "gospel," when investigation proved that it was without foundation. Players who were credited with rather unusual achievements and had enjoyed the reputation, which always follows the appreciation of posterity, were found not to have done as well as some of the quieter players who had never been mentioned. The latter had sat in the background from year to year, in at least one or two instances, too modest to ask for their own rights and in one case unwilling to detract from the other player's reputation because he had "enjoyed it so long." That type of unselfishness does not always exist among professional ball players, but it is found now and then.

In any event, more progress has been made with the records this year than was made in the spring of 1915. The editor fervently hopes that more progress will be made in 1917 than has been made this year and that from season to season the BASE BALL RECORD will become the absolute standard of Base Ball history. That is what it was intended to be when it was started.

Before closing this introduction attention is called to the fact that the Base Ball history of 1915 upset more records than usually are upset in five years. Nor were the upsets always deemed for the best as Base Ball has been played in the past. Some, at least, of the misanthropes will say that they were not for the best. The closeness of the National League race, for instance, cut heavily into almost every department of the game. There are some who look at the records and say that all players are retrograding. Is that true? Is it not more probable that any close race, any race where a scant dozen games separates eight teams almost all of a season will not bring all records down to an average standard, for if athletic contestants are more evenly matched it is certain that no one or two will rush out in front and stand so far away from their fellows that there is no comparison between their work and that of their rivals. Were that the case they would not be equally matched.

Is it not more probable that during the season of 1915 there was a greater equalization of everything—pitchers, batters and fielders—and that because of that fact all players were held closer to their normal Base Ball playing ability. If there are six or seven good pitchers in rival clubs, instead of one, there is not so likely to result one batter who is so far in front of his own league that there never can be any danger of the players of his own league catching him.

None of us, not even those oldest in service, ever saw a closer major league race than that of 1915 in the National League and it is as much a novelty to those who were writing Base Ball in 1890 as to those who were writing it in 1915, hence the editor is inclined to believe that it is a season which should be treated rather gingerly, and that judgment should not be passed too strictly until there is another like it, in order that there may be a better standard on which to pass criticism.

Once more editor and publishers express their grateful thanks to those who have so kindly shown their interest in this publication by affording all the assistance possible toward making it a success, especially as to chronology and accuracy. The editor would call attention to the fact that he received numerous communications regarding dates and many other communications asking as to information about dates and records. He is not only willing to answer such communications but requests that no writer, nor any young player who is after information in regard to the national game, shall hesitate to address him at any time.

BUFFALO TEAM—CHAMPIONS INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE.

- 10—A. G. Spalding died at Point Loma, Cal.—Cravath batted a home run over the Philadelphia N. L. fence with the bases filled, one of the longest hits ever made on the grounds and won from the Giants.
- 11—Louisville had seventeen left on bases.—Dolan, St. Louis N. L., tripled, and the hit defeated Brooklyn.—Philadelphia N. L. defeated Pittsburgh after Wagner and Clarke had been removed.
- 12—New York N. L. made seventeen runs against Cincinnati in the first game of a double-header.—Danforth, Louisville, struck out eighteen Kansas City players and made a new record for the American Association. Marty O'Toole held the record, with seventeen, in 1911.—President O'Neill of the Western League was asked to resign.
- 13—Philadelphia N. L. defeated Pittsburgh in the thirteenth.—Boston A. L. defeated Chicago twice.—James, Detroit, held New York A. L. to two hits.
- 14—Rudolph, Boston N. L., cleared the bases with a home run and won his game from Chicago.—Dumont, Washington, held Cleveland to two hits.—Schang, Philadelphia A. L., in five times at the plate, received four bases on balls and was hit once by the pitcher.—New York A. L. lost its seventh consecutive game.—Boston A. L. defeated Chicago the fourth consecutive game of their series. Chicago made two hits against Ruth.—St. Louis N. L. made eight hits against Marquard in the sixth inning.
- 16—Fletcher, New York N. L., accepted fourteen chances against Pittsburgh at short without an error; ten were assists.—Chicago N. L. defeated Brooklyn, 1-0, in twelve innings.—Umpire Byron made a public apology to a Chicago crowd.
- 17—Until the ninth, Detroit made but one hit against Leonard, Boston A. L. Cobb batted the ball into the right field stand at Boston, an unusual hit.—Pittsburgh defeated New York N. L. twice.—Philadelphia N. L. lost to Cincinnati in a game played in 1 hour and 11 minutes, only five Philadelphia players reaching first base.
- 18—New York N. L. players stole third base three times against Pittsburgh.—Boston N. L. defeated St. Louis, 20-1, first game, and 6-3 second. Griner, Perdue, Niehaus and Lamline pitched for St. Louis in the first.—Boston A. L. defeated Detroit, 1-0, in twelve innings.—Buffalo won International League championship, Providence being defeated twice by Toronto and losing its chance.
- 19—Philadelphia N. L. made but one hit against Ames, St. Louis, in ten innings, and lost, 1-0.—Robertson, New York N. L., drove the ball over the right field sign-board at Chicago, and made four hits in four times at bat.
- 20—Boston A. L. again defeated Detroit.—St. Louis A. L. made but two hits against Dumont, Washington.
- 21—Milan, Washington, stole third and home in succession against Chicago.—Philadelphia N. L. defeated St. Louis twice.
- 22—Boston A. L. defeated Cleveland twice.—One Chicago player reached second base on Benton, New York N. L., after the first inning.—Fohl was continued as manager of the Cleveland club.—Boston A. L. decided to use the Boston N. L. new grounds for the world's series.
- 23—Clarke played his last game as a National League and Pittsburgh player.—New York N. L. scored six runs in the second and knocked Sallee out of the box.—New York A. L. defeated St. Louis twice.—Philadelphia N. L. defeated Chicago twice, the Cubs going into last place.—William Kennedy, former Brooklyn and New York pitcher, died at Bellaire, Ohio.
- 24—Chicago A. L. defeated Philadelphia twice.—After winning seven straight, Boston A. L. lost to St. Louis.—Boston took second place in the National League.
- 25—Detroit defeated Washington twice, but Boston won, and Detroit gained but half a game.—Tipple, New York A. L., pitching first game, held Cleveland to four hits.
- 27—Chicago A. L. defeated Philadelphia, thereby winning every game played in Philadelphia during the season.—Collins, Pittsburgh, was transferred to Boston.—Baumgartner, Philadelphia N. L., wedded Miss Bernice E. Blackham, Philadelphia.
- 28—Cincinnati lost twice to Chicago N. L. and any chance to make the first division.
- 29—Philadelphia defeated Boston and won the National League pennant, for the first time in the history of the Philadelphia club.—Chicago made three home runs against Cincinnati.
- 30—Boston won the American League championship by the defeat of Detroit.

OCTOBER.

- 1—Chicago A. L. defeated St. Louis twice, and Washington defeated and tied Boston.
- 2—National Commission met at New York and agreed to begin world's series October 8. Philadelphia won the toss.
- 3—Detroit defeated Cleveland and won the hundredth game, the first time that feat had been accomplished by the runner-up in an American League race. Cobb stole his ninety-sixth base, a new record for the American League.
- 5—St. Louis A. L. won from St. Louis N. L., 3-2, in first city series game.
- 6—Boston A. L. defeated New York twice, and Boston N. L. defeated New York twice.—Philadelphia defeated Brooklyn twice.—Chicago A. L. defeated Chicago N. L., 9-5, in first city series game.—St. Louis N. L. and St. Louis A. L. played a twelve-inning, 3-3, tie.—New York N. L. was defeated twice by Boston, 1-0, and not an error was made in either game.
- 7—New York and Boston N. L. played a full nine-inning game in 1 hour and 2 minutes, New York winning, 15-8, making twenty-four hits to seventeen.—Chicago N. L. defeated Chicago A. L., 4-0, second game of city series.
- 8—Philadelphia defeated Boston, 3-1, in first world's series game, at Philadelphia, Alexander pitching against Shore.—Chicago A. L. defeated Chicago N. L., 5-2, in the city series.
- 9—Boston defeated Philadelphia, 2-1, in Philadelphia, in the second game of the world's series. Foster pitched against Mayer.—Chicago A. L. defeated Chicago N. L., 5-0, in the city series.—St. Louis A. L. defeated St. Louis N. L., 5-1 and 6-2, in city series.
- 10—Chicago A. L. won championship of the city series by defeating Chicago N. L. for the fourth time, score 11-3, Russell pitching against Lavender, Standridge and Pierce.—St. Louis A. L. defeated St. Louis N. L., 5-0, in second game of a double-header and won city series. St. Louis N. L. won first game, 7-2. Doak pitched against Hilton and Koob, and McCabe pitched against Boardman.
- 11—Boston A. L. defeated Philadelphia, 2-1, at Boston, third game of world's series, Leonard pitching against Alexander. Largest Base Ball crowd on record at a professional game, 42,300, witnessed the contest.

DECEMBER.

- 4—O'Hara, former Giant and Toronto player, enlisted as aviator for the Allies in the great war.
 14—At a meeting of the Southern Association, R. H. Baugh of Birmingham was re-elected president; a limit of fourteen players was adopted.
 16—J. J. Callahan, the former White Sox manager, was made manager of the Pittsburgh club.
 22—Peace was declared at Cincinnati in Base Ball after a meeting between the National Commission and interests of the Federal League, which was not a member of Organized Base Ball. The Federal League signed articles of agreement withdrawing completely from the field, and demonstrating, as has been demonstrated in all Base Ball history, that organization in Base Ball is the only consistent, practical and just system in caring for the nation's game.
 31—James ("Tip") O'Neil, of the famous St. Louis Browns of the '80s, died suddenly in Montreal, Canada.

1. Doyle, New York, leading batter and leader in two-base hits; 2. Alexander, Philadelphia, lowest average of runs earned off pitchers; 3. Meyers, New York, leading catcher; 4. Mollwitz, Cincinnati, leading first baseman; 5. Cutshaw, Brooklyn, leading second baseman; 6. Groh, Cincinnati, leading third baseman; 7. Wilson, St. Louis, leading outfielder; 8. Carey, Pittsburgh, leader in stolen bases; 9. Wagner, Pittsburgh, leading shortstop; 10. Fisher, Chicago, leader in sacrifice hits; 11. Long, St. Louis, leader in three-base hits; 12. Cravath, Philadelphia, leader in home runs and most runs; 13. Adams, Pittsburgh, leading fielding pitcher.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLAYERS IN THE SPALDING BASE BALL
HALL OF FAME.

The Spalding Base Ball Hall of Fame

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Five of the players who were in the Spalding Base Ball Hall of Fame in 1914 are returned to the gallery of the leaders in the Hall of Fame of 1915. They are Wagner, Adams, Carey, Cravath and Wilson. Of these Wagner, Adams and Carey are members of the Pittsburgh team, but try as they have, they have been unable to help the Pittsburgh team win a championship in recent years. Two of them, Wagner and Adams, were members of the Pittsburgh team when it not only won the championship of the National League, but the world's championship as well.

There are some new faces this year in the Hall of Fame, and one of them, that of Doyle, of the New York team, brings to the metropolis of the country for the first time in its history the batting championship of the oldest organization in base ball. There have been many good batters on the roll of the Giants in the past. There have been some who contested with other ball players the leadership in batting all through the season, but Doyle is the first of all Giants actually to finish as the best batter of his organization.

For many seasons Wagner of the Pittsburgh team was the best batter of his league. In 1914 and in 1913 Daubert of the Brooklyn Club led the batters of the National. In 1913 Daubert's average was .359. In 1914 it was .329. In 1912 Zimmerman of the Chicago Club batted for .372. In 1915 Doyle won the batting championship of the National League with .320. Either the pitchers of the National League have "frozen the batters out," as American slang goes, or there are no longer any batters of the type which made the National League famous in the days of Anson, Brouthers, Duffy, Wagner and a score more who might be named.

It is the impression of those, who have been watching the development of Base Ball players in recent years, that there has been a manifest tendency toward weakness in batting. The general averages of players in the National League, as well as those of players in the American League, would indicate that this is the case. It is true that there are fewer players who have batted with a .300 average than ever before in the history of the National League, and it is also true that the falling off in the American League is in evidence, although not quite so conspicuous.

To the credit of Doyle it may be said that he is one of the most persistent of all recent ball players and that since his connection with the New York National League Club, although his success has varied with the seasons in which he has played, he has always been a consistent batter, except in the year in which he injured his shoulder, and even then his batting was affected more because of his inability to drive the ball with his former strength and force than for the reason that his eyesight had misled him.

In addition to being the leading batter of the National League in 1915, Doyle also won the honor of being the batter to make the most two-base hits. From home plate to second base Doyle is one of the fastest runners in base ball. A great deal is heard about batters who are especially fleet from home plate to first base, but Doyle has the rare knack of being able to make the first base turn with the loss of little distance, and that undoubtedly accounts for the fact that he does so well in two-base hits, as he has had a good record in other years than 1915 in that respect.

The principal opponent of the batter is the pitcher. Alexander of the Philadelphia Club unquestionably leads all of the National League pitchers in 1915. There is so little to dispute his supremacy that it is out of the question to talk about a contest being started. The new system of making the records of the pitchers in the various organizations is so far superior to the old, that at last we are beginning to have something like a systematic line from year to year upon the work of the men who are signed to contracts by the clubs of the major leagues. There was nothing so wholly misleading as the old way of trying to attest the value of a pitcher's services on the number of games that he was supposed to have won and lost. "Supposed" is used advisedly, for quite often a pitcher would lose a game in the one inning in which he took part, and quite often he would be credited with a victory because of the single inning, or the inning and part of an inning, in which he pitched. This may be a good standard to test the nerve of a pitcher, but it is not worth much as relating to his work the season through.

Alexander was consistent throughout the year. He did not have much to beat in some games, and he was worried not a little in others, but he kept to a fine standard steadily. There were but one or two pitchers who were of his general efficiency and the men in the National League who had been the greatest of other years fell off very seriously.

One fact, which will be a surprise to a great many persons, is that Cravath of the Philadelphia Club was the leading run getter. He is not fleet of foot and his success in that respect undoubtedly was in part due to the fact that he made a greater number of home runs than any other player. In addition to that he could get on the bases by reason of his ability to bat safely, and the Philadelphia team as a whole was so successful behind him with the bat that once on first he managed to make his way around the circuit. It is not surprising that he leads the National League in home runs, as any batter with a tendency to make long distance hits would be likely to lead the National League if he were signed by the Philadelphia National League Club. It cannot be disputed that the short fences of that ground are much in favor of the "slugger" as against the batter of the "hit 'em out straight" type.

Carey of the Pittsburgh team stole more bases in 1915 than any other player in the National League. There was a great falling off in stolen bases as compared with other years. It is not probable that the catchers were more accurate. Nor does it appear that the runners all lost their speed. There did seem to be less effort to try to steal bases than in the years preceding. Part of this may have been due to the fact that some of the managers changed their style of play. They clung very closely to the sacrifice game which precludes much base stealing.

Long, an outfielder of the St. Louis Club, led the league in making three-base hits. He was specially forceful in this respect on his own ground, which is well adapted to making three-base hits with its deep outfield. The principal sacrifice batter of the National League was Fisher of Chicago. He was quite some distance ahead of all competitors, as a whole, and did his share very well. There was not a little sacrifice hitting on the part of the St. Louis National League Club, but it was well divided among all the batters of that team. They seemed to be particularly successful in their efforts in that respect.

All honor is due to Wagner of the Pittsburgh Club, who once again led the shortstops of the parent organization. It doesn't seem to matter whether time glides or not, Wagner comes back each year with a record at shortstop which is admirable, and it must be recalled that a great deal of this is due to the fact that he is able to cover so much ground. He is one of the oldest ball players of the present time, but he "mixes up" with more chances than any of his colleagues. His batting is not quite so forceful as it was in the past, but last year when, for a moment, the Pittsburgh Club showed a flash of championship form, Wagner was the wonder of the team.

In making the selections for the Hall of Fame, the editor does not try to confine himself simply to the highest records which have been made, as almost always the highest records belong to the players who have taken part in the fewest number of games. The place of honor is based on the fact that the player has taken part in at least twenty full games, and usually he is asked to have taken part in at least twenty-five full games. This number gives a fair index on what a ball player really can do. If there is a choice between the player who has taken part in twenty-five games and the player who has participated in 145 games, the latter is always given the preference. He is entitled to the distinction. It is also true that when a ball player has taken part in fifty games he has gone far enough to establish a standard which entitles him to whatever glory there may be in leading his fellow players if all other conditions warrant accepting his record.

The leading first baseman of the National League, so far as fielding is concerned, was Mollwitz of the Cincinnati Club. Many may not think him the best first baseman of the National League, but he worked hard and steadily and is entitled to the leadership of the organization. The leading second baseman of the National League was Cutshaw of Brooklyn. To him, too, due credit must be given because he did so well in so many games. There may be other second basemen who would be more valuable to a certain manager, but Cutshaw was always on duty when he was able to play.

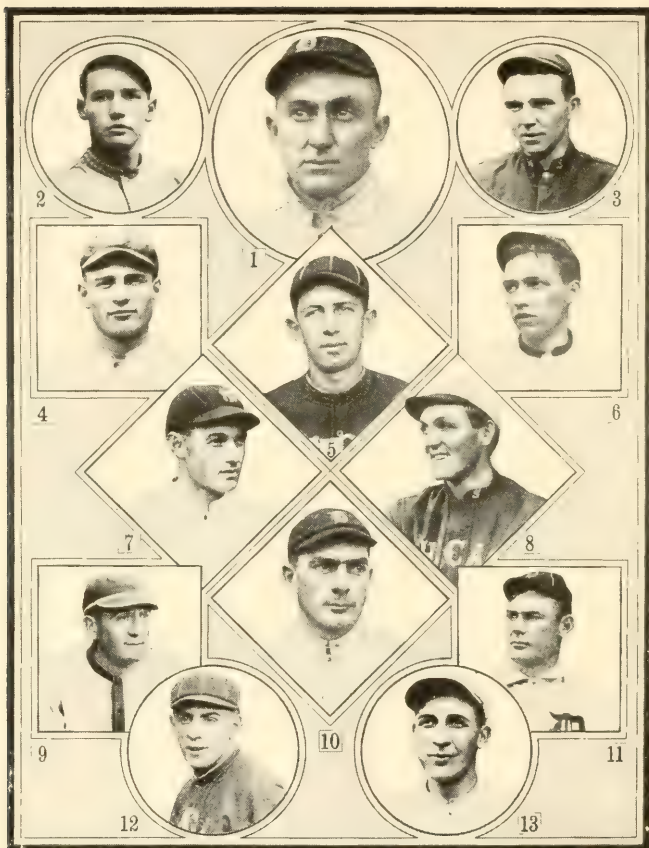

Grob of the Cincinnati Club easily led the third basemen of the National League from the artistic standpoint and from the standpoint of general excellence. There will be no dispute as to his rating. The leading catcher of the league was Meyers of the New York Club. There will be some, and there have been some, who give Snyder preference over Meyers. It is probable that Snyder will be playing ball after Meyers has finished his major league career, but nevertheless the Indian catcher was in enough games in 1915 to establish his right to fielding supremacy.

The leading outfielder of the league was Wilson, as he was in 1914. Year in and year out, since Wilson has been a member of the National League circuit, he has been one of the most reliable of outfielders, and it is seldom that he makes mistakes in his position. Adams led the pitchers, as he has had a habit of doing in the past. He is awkward in going after bunts and yet manages to go through season after season without being charged with a fielding error. Other pitchers of the National League who did not have an error in their positions in 1915 were Demaree of Philadelphia, Robinson of St. Louis and Schupp of New York.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

It would appear that Ty Cobb and the Detroit club had made effort—and it is laudable effort, too—to absorb pretty much all of the places in the Spalding Hall of Fame for the season of 1915. Not since an attempt has been made to recognize the good deeds of the ball players throughout the playing season has there been opportunity to record such consolidation of energy as is manifest in the case of the Detroit club.

For a player to earn one honor is distinction of itself, but Cobb has earned three. It cannot be said that he has earned them with ease, for in the three qualifications in which he excels there is the most competition; but he has earned them, and that is quite enough for the other players to think about. More than that, in earning them he has somewhat outdistanced a great many of his fellows, which probably leads to the frequent discussion that take place whenever Base Ball men are gathered together—"Is the United States producing any more Ty Cobbs for the national game?"

1, Cobb, Detroit, leading batter, also leader in stolen bases and most runs; 2, Wood, Boston, lowest average of runs earned off pitchers; 3, Schalk, Chicago, leading catcher; 4, Pipp, New York, leading first baseman; 5, E. Collins, Chicago, leading second baseman; 6, Vitt, Detroit, leading third baseman, and with Weaver, Chicago, leader in sacrifice hits; 7, High, New York, leading outfielder; 8, Weaver, Chicago, with Vitt, Detroit, leader in sacrifice hits; 9, McBride, Washington, leading shortstop; 10, Veach, Detroit, leader in two-base hits; 11, Crawford, Detroit, leader in three-base hits; 12, Roth, Cleveland-Chicago, leader in home runs; 13, Koob, St. Louis, leading fielding pitcher.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PLAYERS IN THE SPALDING BASE BALL
HALL OF FAME.

For the season of 1915 Cobb is the leading batter of the American League, not with a percentage which is as great as some which he has made, but with a percentage which is much better than was made by most of his contemporaries of the ball field and far superior to the mark which was attained in the National League by Doyle of the Giants, who gained the same distinction.

This is the ninth time in succession that Cobb has excelled the batters of his own organization. When a ball player accomplishes such a task one year after another it must be conceded that he is possessed of physical and mental skill which is superior to that of his rivals. No one has appeared in the American League who seems likely to take Cobb's prestige away from him, and before he has finished his Base Ball years it is more than probable that he will set a mark for the American League which shall stand just as the records of Anson, Wagner and players of that character have stood in the National League.

In the season of 1915 Cobb was not only the best batter in the American League but he was also the best base stealer and he scored more runs than any other player of the organization. The man who can steal more bases than his fellow players, and the man who can make more runs than his fellow players, may be helped to a little degree by the luck of the game, but more than that he must be alert personally to every play that is made, or that is attempted, on the ball field, and to succeed as Cobb succeeded in 1915, without much question rates him the greatest all around player of his circuit last season.

It is not strange that Crawford of the Detroit team again is up to the front and leads the batters of the American League in making three-base hits. It would be strange if he were not somewhere in the van in the matter of long distance hits. He is one of the standard players of his circuit and it will probably be a long time before he will not be a contender for batting honors of some kind.

There is a new face for the distinction of being the best two-base batter. This, too, belongs to Detroit. Veach outstripped all his fellows last year, while in 1914 the honor fell to Speaker of Boston. In batting home runs Roth of Cleveland and Chicago was the best of the league. He did not begin to make as many as Cravath of the National League, but there is a slight difference in the matter of fences which has a great deal to do with the record that was established by Cravath. As it is impossible, however, for all Base Ball outfields to be of uniform size there always will be a disparity in the matter of making home runs, so long as a team, which is assisted by a short fence, shall number among its players one who is a "slugger."

Summed up, it will be noticed that the best batter of the American League was Cobb, the best base stealer was Cobb, the best run getter was Cobb, the best two-base batter was Veach, the best three-base batter was Crawford and the best sacrifice hitter will be found to be Vitt, in connection with Weaver of Chicago, and the best third baseman is Vitt. That is glory enough for one Base Ball team, and no wonder some say that the Detroit club of 1915 was the whole thing, except for that one important little factor, winning the championship.

Weaver of Chicago and Vitt of Detroit each made 42 sacrifice hits. That was equivalent to the number which were made by Fisher of the Chicago National League club, who led the National League in that respect. It is a notable coincidence that the Chicago clubs of the major leagues both had as members the best sacrifice batters of their circuits.

The leading pitcher of the American League, on the basis of earned runs to the game, was Wood of Boston. This distinction in 1914 fell to Leonard, also of Boston, who failed to do well at the beginning of the season of 1915, although he finished well. He was not in the best of condition in the early part of the year and perhaps that had to do with losing the place which he had earned as the best pitcher of the league on records.

Pipp is clearly entitled to be considered the leading first baseman of the circuit on the work which he did with the New York club. He may not have been the best batting first baseman of the circuit, but it must be remembered that batting has nothing to do with the honor of playing the best at first base, which is strictly a fielding function.

Collins of the Chicago club, formerly of the Athletics, without doubt is entitled to be considered as the leading second baseman in 1915. Collins was quite up to the mark, as a whole, that he made with the Philadelphia American League club, with which he already had earned a similar distinction.

Vitt of Detroit, who was the leading third baseman of the circuit, is a newcomer for fielding honors. It is the opinion of those who watched his work in 1915 that he was one factor that helped in placing the Detroit team back in the race, as it had been prior to the loss of players some of whom had advanced beyond the period of their best usefulness and others who thought too little about Base Ball and too much about their spending money.

It is genuine satisfaction to see that McBride of the Washington club is again the leading shortstop. He is one of the sterling players of the American League and season after season plays the best Base Ball that is within him and aids materially in the general excellence of the Washington infield.

Chicago captures the honor of possessing the leading catcher for 1915. Schalk is easily ahead of his rivals. He caught in far more games and his judgment behind the bat was excellent.

The leading pitcher of the league in fielding was Koob of St. Louis, a newcomer. Others who did not make an error in fielding in 1915, were Perryman of St. Louis, Gregg of Boston, Sisler of St. Louis, Carter of Cleveland and Crowell of Philadelphia.

To award the position of leading outfielder is perhaps the hardest task, but all things considered it seems as if it fairly has been earned by High of New York. It is true that there were players with fewer games who made a better average. It is also true that most critics rate Speaker higher than High, yet the latter played more than 100 games and in that number developed an average superior to Speaker and not remotely behind those who did not play in so many games as he did. Looking at the matter from all standpoints it seems as if High cannot be thrust one side, if both opportunities and availed opportunities are taken into consideration, and both should be.

This year's Hall of Fame in the American League is distinctly flavored with Detroit and almost wholly devoid of Boston atmosphere. Perhaps there is information in that which will give the students of Base Ball something about which to think while they are reviewing Base Ball of 1915 and trying to look into the possibilities of Base Ball for 1916.

Boston won the world series in 1915—the Boston club of the American League. Boston won the world's championship in 1914, this time the Boston club of the National League. Boston won the world's championship in 1912, again the Boston club of the American League, and in days which are past it is on record that the Boston club has won other world series and many league championships, proving quite conclusively that the Boston clubs are clubs which are foemen worthy of the bats which they face.

It was the good fortune of the Boston club of the National League to win its championship in four consecutive games, the first time that such an achievement had been accomplished since the world series was first established as a regular factor of the year in organized Base Ball. The Boston club of the American League in 1915, the year following, did not win the championship quite so quickly, yet was within a game of it, and won in five games as the New York National League club did in 1905, the first year of the world series with practical rules to govern the contests. If the Boston club in 1915 did not win in a record breaking series, so far as number of games is concerned, it did win with record breaking crowds, for the attendance at the two games which were played in Boston was larger on each day than the paid attendance of any one game prior to these in the history of professional Base Ball.

The opponents of the Boston Club in 1912 were the New York National League players. In 1915 the Boston Club faced the Philadelphia National League Club. The series in 1912 ran to eight games—the longest series that ever has been played for the world's championship. The games were games of larger scores. At one time, early in the struggle, it appeared as if the Bostons would surely win. Then they were tied by the New York Club and up to the last half of the last inning of the last game played it appeared as if the Giants had the championship won. They did not win because of two errors in play which have become world famous. Boston scored the winning run in the final game before a crowd which caught its breath in hysterical gasps. Nine-tenths of the spectators were hysterical with the joy of unexpected triumph and the other tenth hysterically bemoaned the loss of almost assured victory. The last were visitors from New York.

The series of 1915 endured but five games and all of them games that may be considered those of low scores. The contests were stubbornly fought. The first was won by the Philadelphia Club on the Philadelphia grounds. The next was won at Philadelphia by the Boston Club, the third and fourth were won at Boston by the Boston Club and the last and decisive game was won at Philadelphia by the Bostons. The games in Philadelphia were played on the ground of the Philadelphia National League Club and those in Boston on the grounds of the Boston National League Club. The latter field was chosen because it was larger than the American League grounds in Boston, and the owner of the Boston American League Club, M. J. J. Lannin, considered that he was bound to play on the most available ground that he could find in order that the greater number of base ball enthusiasts might be accommodated. At both the games which were played in Boston the attendance surpassed any records which had been made prior to 1915. The New York Club, until the series of last year, had held the record for attendance, with a crowd of more than 38,000 at the Polo Grounds.

Lewis trapped between second and third in second inning of first game. After Lewis had hit a single to left, Gardner sacrificed, Alexander to Luderus. On Barry's hit to the pitcher's box, Lewis was out, Alexander to Stock to Niehoff, Barry going to second.

As usual the experts were busy before the series was played with their analyses of the different players of both clubs and the possibilities of the teams as co-ordinate bodies. Quite as usual the figures were contrary to the results. It was pretty generally believed that the Boston Club would defeat its rivals and that was the only ante-series theory which really worked out with what might be called unanimous success. However, it did not take statistics to demonstrate the possibilities of the Boston Club. Their general team work throughout the season, in the campaign through which they had struggled, as against the general team work of the Philadelphia Club in the National League campaign, was the most significant factor of any which could be taken into consideration prior to an actual meeting between the clubs. The National League race was close, and it was a race of closeness based both upon base ball of the highest standard and a lower standard. National League base ball was not mediocre base ball, yet it was what the base ball "fan" could be excused for saying was not always top-notch base ball. Almost all of that could be forgiven, for it was extremely interesting base ball, and after all, that is the main desideratum where base ball is played professionally.

The Philadelphia Club was largely a one-pitcher club. The Boston Club had more than one pitcher who was successful, and it was perhaps well that such was the case, for the Boston Club did not come up in every way to expectation in a contest for the leading title. It was quite as hard for the Boston Club to score runs as it was for its rival. The closeness of the games proved that conclusively, and the efforts of the players on the field proved it even more conclusively. Both Boston and Philadelphia played a conservative game, so conservative in fact that one afternoon's contest was a replica of the other so far as intentions were concerned, and all that made a difference in the results was the individual work of the different players as they were called upon to perform in the different innings.

Unquestionably if Cravath had batted better there would have been more runs for the Philadelphia Club, and perhaps the Philadelphia Club would have won more than one game in the series. On the other hand, much credit must be given to the Boston pitchers, for they were surely successful in keeping Cravath from making one of those hits which change history in a base ball race. Cravath had his opportunities during the series, but did not arise to them as he had in the games against the National League clubs during the season. When Baker won a world series from the New York Club in 1911, the Philadelphia critics were filled with admiration of this player, praising loudly the two home runs which drove defeat into the hearts of the Giants. In 1915 Hooper made two home runs for Boston in the last game of the series, a feat which accomplished a result identical with that which was achieved by the two home runs made by Baker, and yet there are some who talk only about Hooper's luck as against Baker's wonderful skill. That is hardly fair to Hooper. ♦

There was no lack of enthusiasm prior to the series, merely proving that the fundamental of base ball—the admiration of the American for a pastime which is far superior to any outdoor contest that has been originated—is as sound as ever, however much the surface may be disturbed by covetous promoters and greedy performers. The crowds were every bit as large as any which could be accommodated in the premises on which the games were played. Had it been possible for the management of both clubs to have built stands which would have seated 10,000 more, there is no reason to doubt that they would have filled them. In connection with this it is not out of place to call attention to the fact that an extra stand which was built at Philadelphia was sealed by a bounding ball, which resulted in a home run and the loss of the championship to the National League. There was some criticism passed against the Philadelphia management for building this stand, it being alleged that for a few pennies the pennant had been lost. Suppose that one of the Philadelphia players had batted the ball into this stand and the championship had been won. Would the same supercilious critic have insisted that the Philadelphia management had built the stand where it was located for the purpose of winning the championship for the glory of the National League? As a matter of fact, the stand was constructed solely to provide every seat possible and every seat which seemed feasible for the patrons of the games in Philadelphia. The applications for seats were far in excess of the seating capacity of the structures on the field and the head of the club was anxious in every way that he could to accommodate local enthusiasts. It may also be said that the cry of ticket speculation which was raised in Philadelphia had its origin in a source which was hostile to the Philadelphia management because of the refusal of the owners of the Philadelphia Club to allot tickets in huge quantities. It was quickly proved that there was less ticket speculation in Philadelphia than usual and that the politicians for once had not absorbed the bulk of the accommodations.

Speaker sliding safely to plate in eighth inning of first game. After Scott had went out on a pop fly to Rancroft, Speaker walked, went to second on Hohlitzel's out. Stock to Ludens, and scored on a single to left by Lewis.

The weather was generally good throughout the series. At the start Philadelphia was unfortunate enough to be liberally drenched by an overnight rainfall. After that the clouds kept out of sight, to the great joy of those who followed the contests.

FIRST GAME—AT PHILADELPHIA, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8.

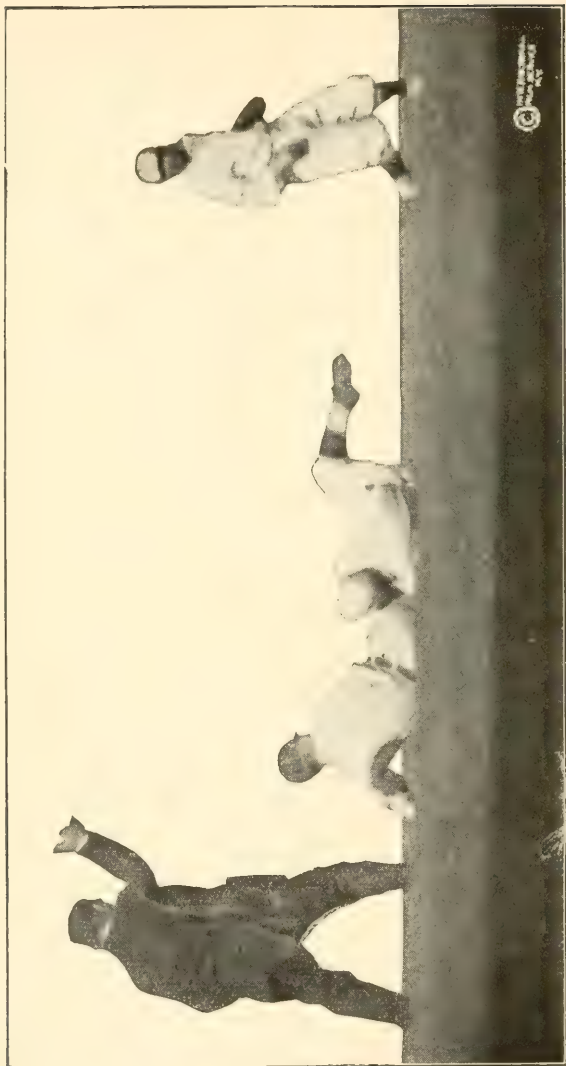

The opening game was played on a heavy, soggy field. There was no elasticity to the diamond and the ball hugged the ground closely. Slow bounding hits were as good as those which might have been smashed hard.

In the fourth inning of the game Paskert started with a Texas Leaguer to right field. Cravath sacrificed. Shore threw the ball to first base to retire Cravath, although he had plenty of time to get Paskert at second. Luderus batted to Barry and was thrown out at first base, Paskert going to third. Whitted batted a slow grounder to Barry, who was unable to get the ball to first in time, and Paskert scored the first run of the series.

In the eighth inning Boston tied the score. Scott fied out to Bancroft and Speaker was intentionally given a base on balls by Alexander. Hoblitzel batted to Stock. The latter fumbled the ball long enough to give Speaker a chance to reach second, although Hoblitzel was thrown out at first base. Two strikes were on Lewis when he batted the ball to left field for a single and Speaker scored. Paskert retired the side when he made a fine catch of Gardner's fly after a long run for the ball.

In Philadelphia's half of this inning Barry threw Alexander out. Stock was given a base on balls. Bancroft batted the ball over second and Barry made a magnificent stop, only to find that Scott had forgotten to cover second base. Shore gave a base on balls to Paskert, filling the bases. Cravath batted an infield grounder and Shore failed to try for the ball, permitting it to go to Scott. The latter threw to first and Stock scored, instead of being forced out at the plate. Luderus rapped a grounder in front of the plate and again Shore failed to handle the ball properly and Bancroft scored. These were all the runs of the game and the contest ended 3 to 1 in favor of the Philadelphia Club.

Conspicuous in this game were blunders such as might have been made by any player in a regular contest of the season for the championship of a major league. Shore was visibly upset when asked to handle the ball as a fielder, a fault, by the way, which has always been with him from his earliest entry into base ball. Scott's failure to cover second base was the forgetfulness of a young player self centered for the moment on the importance of the task and his desire to do well. Stock's momentary fumble at third base was only such a fumble as may happen to any third baseman who tries to knock down and stop a hard hit ball with sufficient accuracy to throw for a double play. The most noticeable characteristic of the game, a characteristic which followed all the series through, and to which attention has already been called, was the deadly monotony of the scheme of play, which was almost identically alike on both sides and which in substance was to play for one run if the first batter should happen to get on first base safely.

Bancroft safe at second base after a steal which would have been unsuccessful had Barry not dropped the swift, clean throw from Cady. Umpire Rigler is motioning an "out," a decision he later changed when he discovered that Barry had dropped the ball. First inning, fourth game.

SECOND GAME—AT PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 9.

President Wilson was a spectator at the second game. This, too, was played at Philadelphia. The President was accompanied by his fiancée, Mrs. Galt. He received the first ball put into play as a souvenir. The grounds were in better condition for the play and the sun shone. The result of the game was 2 to 1 in favor of Boston.

The first run was scored in the first inning by the Boston Club. Mayer, who was pitching for Philadelphia, gave Hooper a base on balls. Scott tried to sacrifice and fouled to Luderus. Speaker batted the ball to right field for a single and Hooper went to third. A double steal was tried. Speaker was thrown out at second base and Hooper would have been out at the plate if Burns, the Philadelphia catcher, had not dropped the return throw.

In the fifth inning Philadelphia tied the score. Cravath began with a two base hit and Luderus followed with another, Cravath scoring the only run which was made by the Philadelphia players during the game. After Luderus had made his two-base hit the succeeding Philadelphia players were so helpless against Foster, the pitcher for the Boston Club, that he retired them in order and Luderus had to die on the bases, figuratively gnashing his teeth because of his inability to score.

In the ninth inning Gardner of Boston began with a sharp single to left field. Barry tried to sacrifice and finally batted a long fly to Paskert. Janvrin tapped the ball to Mayer and was thrown out at first base, Gardner going to second. Foster, pitcher for Boston, who had already made two hits, again batted the ball safely, this time to center field, and Gardner scored what proved to be the winning run.

Paskert narrowly escaped tying the score in Philadelphia's half of this inning. He batted a wicked liner toward center field, which was carried by the wind over the low barrier. Speaker was leaning over the fence when he caught the ball. That was the second time in four years that a Boston American League player had saved a game in a world series by reaching over the fence and preventing a home run. In 1912 Hooper leaned over the right field fence at Boston and deprived Doyle of the Giants of a home run which not only would have won the game for the New York Club, but would have won the world's championship as well.

THIRD GAME—AT BOSTON, MONDAY, OCTOBER 11.

The third game of the series was played in Boston. The spectators numbered 43,200. This was the largest attendance as registered by turnstiles that ever saw a base ball game. The score of this game was 2 to 1. The opposing pitchers were Alexander and Leonard. The latter is a left hand pitcher.

It had been asserted that the Philadelphia Club would be particularly strong against a left hand pitcher. This proved to be as far from the truth as most of the other ante-series rubbish about the probable outcome of the contest. As a matter of fact, the Philadelphia players never had proved in their work in the National League that they favored left hand pitchers, as opposed to right hand pitchers, a fact which might easily have been verified by looking over their records for previous seasons. In the last six innings only eighteen Philadelphia batters faced Leonard, disproving quite completely the prediction that a left hand pitcher would not be able to hold his own against the National League Club.

Under the circumstances Alexander pitched quite as creditable a game as his opponent. It is true that he was beaten, but he was given no assistance by his fellow players. Had they shown ability to score it is probable that Alexander would have retired from the series unbeaten. Only six hits were made against him and of these three were batted by Lewis. The latter, by the way, who did not distinguish himself in the world series in 1912, was the most conspicuous player in the world series of 1915 for the Boston Club.

Philadelphia scored the first run of the game in the third inning. Burns began with a single to right center. Alexander batted the ball to Gardner, who threw perfectly, but Hohlitzel made a square muf of the ball. Stock followed with a sacrifice. Bancroft hit for a base and Burns scored. Alexander was held at third, as Speaker returned the ball accurately to the plate. An unusually brilliant play by Barry deprived Paskert of a hit and perhaps cost Philadelphia the game, for Alexander was still held at third on what seemed to be a sure single.

In the next inning Scott fled to Paskert. Speaker rapped a three-bagger to right field, Cravath playing the ball both slowly and poorly. Hohlitzel rapped a long sacrifice fly to Paskert and Speaker scored the tying run.

Boston won the game in the ninth. Hooper, with two strikes against him, singled to right field. Scott advanced him to second on a slow hit to Niehoff. Alexander intentionally gave a base on balls to Speaker. Hohlitzel was retired at first, but both base runners advanced. Instead of playing the game safe and putting Lewis on first, by means of a base on balls, Alexander undertook to pitch to him. The result was a base hit on the first ball pitched and Hooper crossed the plate with the winning run. If Lewis had been given a base on balls Gardner would have been the next batter. He had not been hitting the ball with any effectiveness and Lewis had. Alexander would have been as safe with three on bases as with two on bases, for one run was bound to win. It seems, therefore, that he erred in judgment when he tempted Lewis to bat the ball. It would have been better, so far as one may judge by the records, to have taken a chance with Gardner, even though the latter made a hit. With the bases filled there were a greater number of chances to retire the third hand and the side.

FOURTH GAME—AT BOSTON, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 12.

The fourth game of the series was also played at Boston. This, too, was a 2 to 1 game, the third of that score in succession. The pitchers were Chalmers for Philadelphia and Shore for Boston. Had Chalmers been used in the second game, which was played at Philadelphia, the chances are that it would have been better for him and better for the Philadelphia Club. With his baffling manner of delivery, which is more confusing than the ball which he pitches, he was the logical follower of Alexander. The attendance was somewhat smaller than at the third game, but would have been larger had the police arrangements been equal to the day and the demand.

Boston scored the first run in the third inning. Barry was given a base on balls. It was the one questionable base on balls, so far as judgment was concerned, of the series. Cady bunted and Chalmers, who ran for the ball, slipped down. He still had time to get the batter at first base, but Niehoff's wits were wool gathering. He had failed to cover first base and both Barry and Cady were safe. Evans called a balk against Chalmers, but the ruling was reversed on appeal to Umpire Rigler and the latter was right. Chalmers was not on the plate when Evans decided that he had committed a balk. Shore's sacrifice advanced both base runners and Hooper was lucky enough to hit an infield bouncer which sailed over Chalmers' head. Barry scored, but the remaining Boston batters were retired by Chalmers, who got out of a bad plight better than expected.

Boston scored again in the sixth. Speaker was retired at first base. Hoblitzel batted a single safely to center field and ran home when Lewis hit the ball to the left field fence for two bases.

The Philadelphia Club escaped a shutout in the eighth inning. With two batters out, Cravath batted a line drive to center field that bounded over Speaker's head. Cravath reached third base and ran home when Luderus batted for a single.

The game was very mechanical and rather uninteresting. Much of it was taken up by the experts in speculation as to whether Cravath's long flies would have been home runs if the contest had been played on the Philadelphia ground, a frank admission that the Philadelphia field does favor long fly hitters.

FIFTH GAME—AT PHILADELPHIA, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13.

The fifth game was played at Philadelphia on the following day and was the last of the series. It was won by Boston. All the seats for still another game in Boston on the day succeeding had been sold by the Boston management and the money was subsequently refunded.

There was a great deal of guessing as to whether the Philadelphia manager would start Alexander again. He did not do so. On the contrary, he used Mayer, and when the latter was practically batted out of the box he substituted Rixey. Foster pitched for the Boston Club. In this game, as well as in the other in which he took part, he not only outpitched his rival, but for all that could be seen would have been quite as successful against Alexander.

The Phillies started off bravely in the last game. Twice they had a fine lead over their rivals, but Boston batted hard and won out in the ninth. The game was the most spectacular of any of the five which were played and by far the most interesting, largely due to the fact that there was more action to it and less dull pegging by pure physical effort for a single score.

Hooper made two home runs in the game, thanks to the short fences of the Philadelphia field, which were supposed particularly to bless the Philadelphia players, and Lewis made another. It is probable that it will be a long time before any other ball player makes two home runs in a world series contest, but the conditions may not be the same for some time.

The Phillies began well. Stock was hit by a pitched ball. Bancroft singled to left. Paskert beat a bunt to Gardner and the bases were filled. Cravath again failed and batted into a double play. Luderus tapped a two-base hit to left field and two runs came home for the Philadelphia Club. Had Cravath done anything with the bat Philadelphia might have started with a lead which it would have been impossible for the Boston Club to overcome.

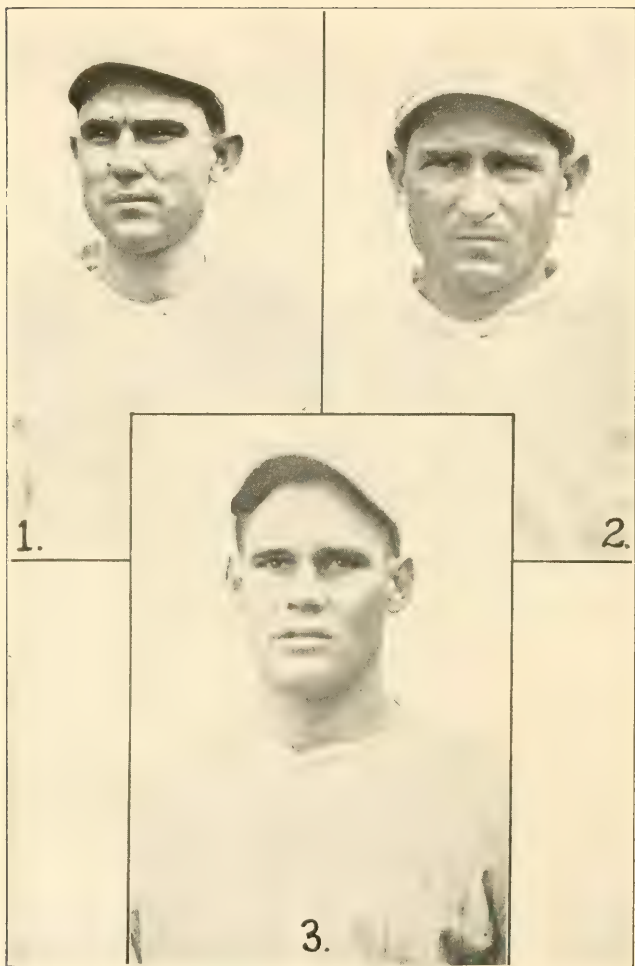

In the second inning, with two out, Gardner batted to center field for three bases. Barry rapped a single to left and Gardner scored.

Boston tied the score in the third inning when Hooper batted a long line drive that bounded into the bleachers for a home run. In this inning Mayer was taken from the box and Rixey substituted.

The Philadelphia Club went ahead again in the fourth. After Cravath had been put out of the way Luderus batted the ball over the right field fence for a home run. Whitted flied out and Niehoff hit safely to center and Burns to right. The ball was thrown badly to third base by Hooper and Niehoff scored.

In the eighth Boston again tied the score. Gainor batted toward third. Stock played the ball very poorly. He backed away from it instead of going in for the ball. Lewis, who had not been batting with any effectiveness during the afternoon, caught a fast one right at the thick of his bat and rapped a home run into the center field bleachers, scoring Gainor ahead of him.

Whitted had a chance to bat in two runs for the Philadelphia Club in the eighth inning, but he, like Cravath, had been a poor batter all through the series and failed. Boston won the game in the last half of the ninth inning when Hooper, with two strikes against him and one hand out, batted the ball for the second time in one afternoon into the bleachers for a home run, whereupon all those who had previously lauded Baker for doing pretty much the same thing casually referred to Hooper's feat as being lucky.

MINNEAPOLIS TEAM—CHAMPIONS AMERICAN ASSOCIATION.

Philadelphia National League—Record Breakers

In 1883, under the management of the veteran, Robert Ferguson, now deceased, the Philadelphia National League club made its first fight for the championship of the circuit around which centers most of the Base Ball history of oldest times. History that is not so very ancient at that, in view of the fact that the limit of years is circumscribed by 1883, but old in the days of Base Ball.

For thirty-three years of patient endeavor the Phillies battled unwaveringly, with stubbornness and long enduring effort to win the pennant of the senior organization. In the thirty-third year of the history of the club the pennant was won by a team, compared with Philadelphia teams of other days—these are the words of some of the more modern Base Ball writers—as “second raters.” There is little doubt that this opinion is not entertained unanimously throughout the Base Ball world. It is barely possible that those who essayed to criticize with such harshness the ability of the Philadelphia National League players have forgotten that it was customary thus to speak of the champion Baltimores in the first days of their pennant winning, and perhaps it is not recalled by some of them that it was in Philadelphia and other cities that the champion Giants of 1905 and 1911 and 1912 were carelessly banished to one side by the one term “lucky.” In fact, it is more often the case that our American champions in many kinds of sport are most harshly denounced by flippant writers after they have succeeded in winning, than lauded for the persistence and courage exercised in the fight of trying to win. All the world loves to cavil at success and too little of the world will give credit to the achievement of that which is the result of painstaking endeavor.

It may be true that individually the Philadelphia National League players appeared to be less expert than some of their predecessors. It may be true that in 1915 circumstances assisted them. It is also true that if individually they were less expert than as a team, they nevertheless proved their ability to win, and it is team work that still does more toward winning Base Ball championships than any factor of which we have knowledge. It is also true that the Philadelphia club was in possession of one splendid winning pitcher, and he was fairly well assisted by his fellows in the box. It is well known, and can easily be demonstrated by looking over the Base Ball history of the past, that any club which has for a member one or two winning pitchers of the higher type, will be more likely to win a championship or finish in the first division than contemporaries. Therefore, Philadelphia was well equipped in 1915 and so good was Alexander, the winning pitcher of the club, that it frequently has been said any one of the National League clubs might almost have won the championship if it had been possessed of an Alexander. This proves more than anything could prove the evenness with which players were distributed throughout the National League circuit for 1915.

In part of the thirty-three years of the Philadelphia club's history the affairs of the organization on the playing field were handled by one of the most famous men in Base Ball—Harry Wright. For ten years he was at the head of the team and in his time he had engaged as players for the Philadelphia club some of the most celebrated of our Base Ball heroes, including both Delehanty and Sam Thompson, two players always synonymous with powerful batting. But Harry Wright could not win a championship. Once only he finished as low as sixth place. Five times he was in fourth place. Three times he finished third and, in 1887, when the Detroit won the championship of the National League, he was second. Even though not a pennant winner, he made a truly great record, as he was never out of the first division but once in ten seasons, and that the year in which he took up the management of the team.

Arthur Irwin succeeded him and finished fourth and third. The team under Irwin did not progress as the owners of the club felt that it should and he was succeeded by Shettsline for one year. The management was taken by Shettsline under protest. Stallings followed Shettsline and for the only time in its history the Philadelphia club finished tenth under Stallings as manager. Again Shettsline returned to the management and was splendidly successful for three years. The team dropped back to seventh place in 1902 and Zimmer, formerly catcher of the Cleveland club, was brought in to try to change its fortunes. Zimmer was a better catcher than manager and remained only a year at Philadelphia. He was succeeded by Hugh Duffy, who, at the expiration of a year, changed the course of the team from downhill to uphill, and at the end of the third year was supplanted by William Murray, who was moderately successful in handling the players.

The manager who succeeded Murray was Dooin, formerly a catcher, and his success varied. He brought the team up to second place in 1913, but dropped back to sixth in 1914, and that very likely brought about a change of management, although it is not out of place to say that a great deal of Dooin's misfortune with the Philadelphia team had as much to do with the individual players as it did to the method of management.

Moran was made manager of the team for 1915. There was not a Base Ball writer in the United States, with the possible exception of one or two of Philadelphia local affiliation, who gave the Philadelphia club a chance to finish better than the second division. Strangely enough, there was one player on the Philadelphia club who insisted from the time that the team began to train in the South that Philadelphia would win the championship. This player was Whitted, who had been obtained from Boston by trade. Even when newspaper writers and his own comrades joked with him he could not be induced to change his opinion and reiterated that the Phillies would lead the National League at the end of the year. Whatever his opinion may have been based upon, it is possible that some of his air of confidence may have affected his fellow players, for the Philadelphias, who in some seasons had not been over-zealous all of the year, hung to their task with bulldog tenacity all of 1915. In the early part of the season they managed to win twelve games almost "in a row," as the boys say. With these twelve victories, odds in their favor and not a handicap against them, it seemed out of the question for any other club to catch up. Their principal antagonists two or three times drew alongside, but the width of that lead, gained early in the race, stood the present National League champions in such good grace that when the fight was all over the Philadelphia club was seven games in front of Boston, which was second in the race.

The success of the Philadelphia club in 1915, if it did nothing else, proved that a game fight and the vicissitudes of Base Ball may win for the man, or men, who will back the endeavor to win a championship. It matters not whether this or the other individual thinks that Moran made the right trades or the wrong trades, or that this manager or the other manager showed lack of judgment in transferring players to the Philadelphia club for players of that club. It is undoubtedly that both were right from their standpoint. It is not always the truth that ball players are transferred from one club to another because of the fact that all of their playing days are over. There are as weighty reasons for change as the fact of loss of physical expertness. What developed out of the trades and the general shift of ball players in 1915 was the fact that Philadelphia got a team which could win a National League championship for the first time in the history of the Philadelphia club and it is perfectly safe to say that no result could be imagined which would give more real joy to the hearts of the Philadelphia club owners.

The Philadelphia club also retained the right to try for the world championship, a right which would not have come to it had the championship been won back in the days of Harry Wright. Perhaps crying more bitterly than is deserved, it has been said that the Philadelphia players were a weak world championship team. If such is the case, how about the Boston club that won the world championship? Analyze the scores and look over the games and it will be noted that even if Philadelphia did not win, the Bostons did not have a summer picnic in trying to score. Had the Philadelphias batted on their own ground in the world series as they did in the race for the National League title, perhaps they would have beaten Boston. On the other hand, had they batted on the Boston ground with the luck which clubs ordinarily have in ball games, they might have beaten Boston. Where a single run constantly proved to be such an important factor in a Base Ball game as it did in practically all of the games of the last world series it is hardly fair to do much discriminating between the rival players.

The following is a table which shows the work of the Philadelphia National League club since its formation, and it has broken all records in the history of the National League, as in 1915 it won its first championship after trying since 1883:

Alexander Makes a New Record

GROVER CLEVELAND ALEXANDER.

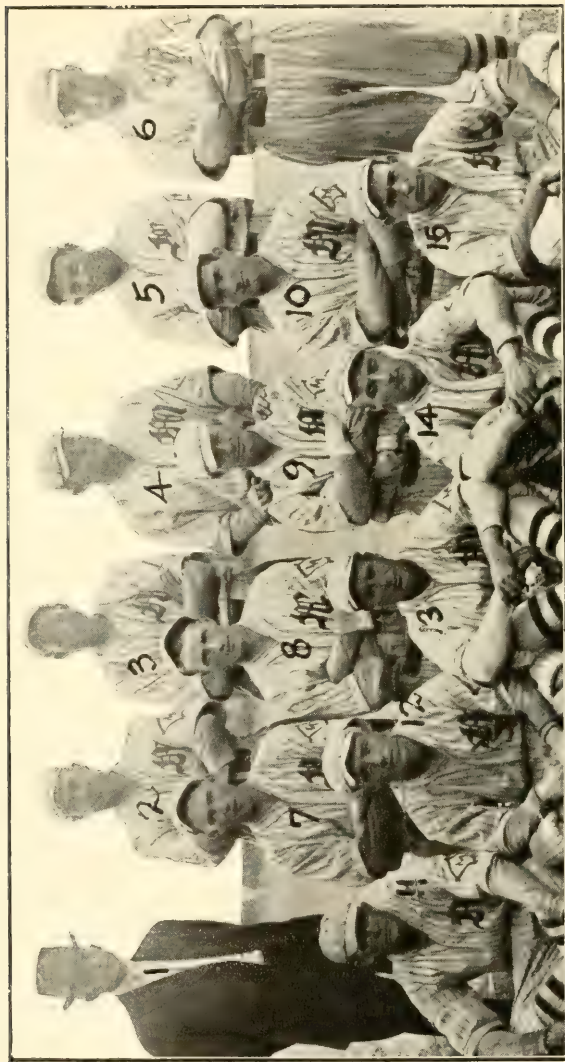

Whatever may have been the average and combined caliber of the players of the Philadelphia National League club during the season of 1915, the pitching of Alexander was so universally good, and had been so good in 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914 that he must always be considered in the history of Base Ball as one of the great men of the pitcher's box.

While there are pitchers who have been in service a longer term of years and others who have accomplished more in single games than Alexander, the latter made a record in 1915 which is quite unlike either a strike-out record or a shut-out record. He now holds the record for pitching the greatest number of few hit games in the National League since the pitching distance was changed at the annual meeting which was held in Chicago in 1892. It was at that session years ago of the National League that the pitching distance was put at its present distance of 60 feet 6 inches.

longer than ever had been required before in the rules of Base Ball, and throwing a new burden upon the arms of the National League pitchers.

Alexander now has to his credit sixteen games in which the opposing batters made four hits or less. This surpasses the record of Mathewson by one game. In 1908, one of the best years that Mathewson had enjoyed while with the New York team, he held the opposing batters in fifteen games to four hits or less. At that time Mathewson was almost as much a strike-out pitcher as Alexander in his last five seasons.

Alexander made his entrance into the National League in 1911. That year Marquard was the leading pitcher of the League and Alexander was fourth, followed closely by Mathewson. Alexander won 28 games and lost 13 for the Phillies, his percentage being .683. He struck out 227 players. In 1912 Alexander won 19 games and lost 17. That was much inferior to his work of the preceding year. He struck out 195 batsmen, which was more than any other pitcher in the National League struck out, and the pitcher next to him was Hendrix of Pittsburgh. In 1913 Alexander won 22 games and lost 8. On the basis of earned runs to a game, however, which is the real basis upon which a pitcher's work should be reckoned, he was eighteenth in the National League. This year he struck out but 159 batsmen, fewer than in either of the preceding years in the National League.

MOLINE TEAM—CHAMPIONS INDIANA-ILLINOIS-IOWA LEAGUE.

In 1914 Alexander won 27 games and lost 15. On the earned run basis he was tenth in the National League. The number of batsmen that he struck out was 214. He again led the National League in that respect and for the second time as a National League pitcher went over the 200 mark. In 1915 Alexander won 31 games and lost 10. On the earned run basis he at last led the National League. Showing both his strength as a pitcher, and the general tendency toward weak batting in the National League, he struck out 241 players, or more than he had struck out since he had left the minor leagues to become a major league player.

In five years Alexander has struck out 1036 batsmen, or an average to a season of 207 1/5. It may not be that this is a record, but it is the opinion of the editor of the RECORD that these figures for five years in succession are superior to any that have been made by any pitcher in a major league for the last twenty years.

In his five years in the National League Alexander has pitched 35 no-run games, an average of 7 a season. This is better than has been done by Walter Johnson in the American League. In 1915 Alexander had a record of 11 no-run games. There is only one pitcher in the history of the National League who has done better and he is James Galvin of Pittsburgh, who, in 1884, pitched 12 no run games, all victories.

Alexander's first work as a professional player was in Galesburg, Ill. He was a member of the Galesburg club, of the Illinois and Missouri League, from whence he went to Syracuse. After Alexander arrived at Syracuse he made New York State sit up and take notice. He pitched from one city to another in the New York State League and won 14 no-run games from his rivals. In the last fifty innings that he pitched in the league not a run was scored against him.

The Philadelphia National League club negotiated for his services and, after it was practically assured that Philadelphia could have him, it was reported in Syracuse that the Phillies were trying to change the transfer. It was a very good thing for them that they failed to do so. Alexander joined the Philadelphia club the next spring, with Dooin as manager, and his record of 1911 has already been noted above.

It is a peculiar characteristic of Alexander's pitching that when he does get hit he usually gets hit hard. In only twelve out of the fifty games in which he took part in 1915 was there a failure on the part of opposing teams to make one or more extra base-hits. Perhaps 50 two-baggers, a half dozen triples and two home runs were made against his pitching. Wagner made the first home run, spoiling Alexander's chance for a no-hit no-run game. Williams of the Chicago Cubs also made a home run, thereby winning a four-hit game by the score of 2 to 1.

The Philadelphia pitcher is strictly a pitcher with side arm delivery. At no time in his career has he been able to get his arm over his shoulder, as Mathewson pitches. Sometimes Alexander uses a clearly defined underhand motion, but most of the time he pitches with a long sidearm swing. This seems to be used most generally when he is pitching a curve ball. His speed is perhaps swifter than that of any other pitcher of the National League of the present day. He is most successful, with an alternating wide sweeping curve that never seems to break twice alike, followed by an inshoot. Unlike most pitchers, he can pitch his outcurve with a great deal of speed. As a rule, a pitcher who has a very pronounced outcurve must "slow up" on the speed in order to get the ball to deflect its course where he wishes. It seems to be a matter of no concern to Alexander as to the amount of speed that he intends to inject into his pitching, for the ball will curve to suit him, whether at high pressure or slow pressure.

Another War Ended

After an utterly impractical struggle of two years, doing good to none collectively although there may have been those who profited for the moment individually—the attempt of the Federal League to establish a third major league in Base Ball has been abandoned.

It is not the present intention of the editor of the RECORD, nor his wish, to analyze the happenings of the last two years. The outcome of the struggle was ever in evidence, in spite of those who wilfully blinded their eyes to their certain destination. The differences between the major leagues and the so-called "outlaw" league established fully who were the friends of organized Base Ball and who were not. It is rather a sad commentary upon some individuals, that they failed when it came to the moment that they should have proved their allegiance to Organized Base Ball, which had done so much for them. However that has been a frailty of human nature in all wars—whether of muscle or brains.

That which has been proven again most conclusively, and which is the most essential fact of the national game, as viewed from the professional standpoint, is that organization in Base Ball is absolutely essential to its welfare, and that without it professional Base Ball would become a worthless, headless, purposeless travesty on sport.

That which was demonstrated most conclusively, in fact, made apparent above all else, was the truism that there was not, is not, nor ever had been the slightest demand from the public for a third major league. Base Ball critics who leaned to the third major league were out of joint with the times and some of them not fully cognizant with the trials which beset the existence of two major leagues, to say nothing about attempting to maintain the life of a third.

The editor would like to quote from Mr. Albert G. Spalding's open letter while this controversy was going on. He said: "The real backbone of Base Ball is the American youth, and his love for the National Game may be depended upon to protect it against the greed and the shortsightedness of its enemies. The prevailing zephyr is not worthy of comparison to the cyclones of bygone years. Organized Base Ball has come to stay."

The efforts of the one league, which was outside the organization, were those of emotional attack. The basis of their attack was upon the players who were allied to Organized Base Ball. The premises of the league were wrong and the end of their effort was a frank admission on their part that they had been wrong. Starting upon the assertion that the ten days' clause and the reserve rule were hardships, as imposed upon ball players, the non-allied league granted at the end of the struggle that both were necessary to the maintenance of professional Organized Base Ball, thereby conceding fully that their whole attempt to establish themselves had been based upon an argument as full of holes as a sieve.

The first advances toward the end of the Federal League were made by members of that organization. They were made both to members of the National League and to those of the American League. Twice the struggle between the contending organizations seemed about to be settled upon a basis wholly to the credit of Organized Base Ball but both times the negotiations were discontinued because of the intervention of other events.

A third time members of the Federal League met members of the National League. Neither side was fully delegated to act. Both sides were in position where they could make a report to their leagues as a whole. As a matter of fact, the members representing the Federal League at that time comprised about all the fighting force that was left of the Federal League.

A tentative agreement was drawn up and it was thoroughly understood by all concerned that no further action was to be taken until the American League had been consulted and, without dissenting voice, agreed upon that which had been done. Both sides were pledged to secrecy and both sides endeavored to respect their pledge. It was because of this that President Tener was inadvertently made the target of criticism which was not wholly deserved. The press, at least a part of it, as often has been the case, in some manner had learned much of that which had taken place and the essential facts were published. Not being aware of this the president of the National League, in trying to keep his word with the other gentlemen who had met with him; was sharply attacked for that which he could hardly have avoided under the circumstances. Any man of honor who had given his word most assuredly would try to protect it.

The routine end of the Federal League shortly followed. Mr. Dreyfuss, as a committee of one from the National League, was sent to Chicago to acquaint the members of the American League, who were in session in that city, of the facts in the agreement which had been drawn up between the individual members of the National League and Messrs. Sinclair and Gilmore of the Federal League.

In an address of one hour Mr. Dreyfuss outlined thoroughly that which had been temporarily agreed upon. The American League acquiesced in all which had been done. A committee of that organization was appointed and was on its way to New York within twenty-four hours.

The joint committee of the National League, American League and Federal League met in the Waldorf Astoria on the second day thereafter. After a temporary organization of the general committee the members of the Federal League withdrew to permit the National and the American League members to consult together as to whether they should agree upon the settlement of differences as outlined in the original agreement. This they decided to do and the members of the Federal League were notified. The latter met with the members of Organized Base Ball on the same evening and a general conference ensued until midnight. As a result of that conference the settlement of the Base Ball war was entrusted to the members of the National Commission and to the committee of the Federal League.

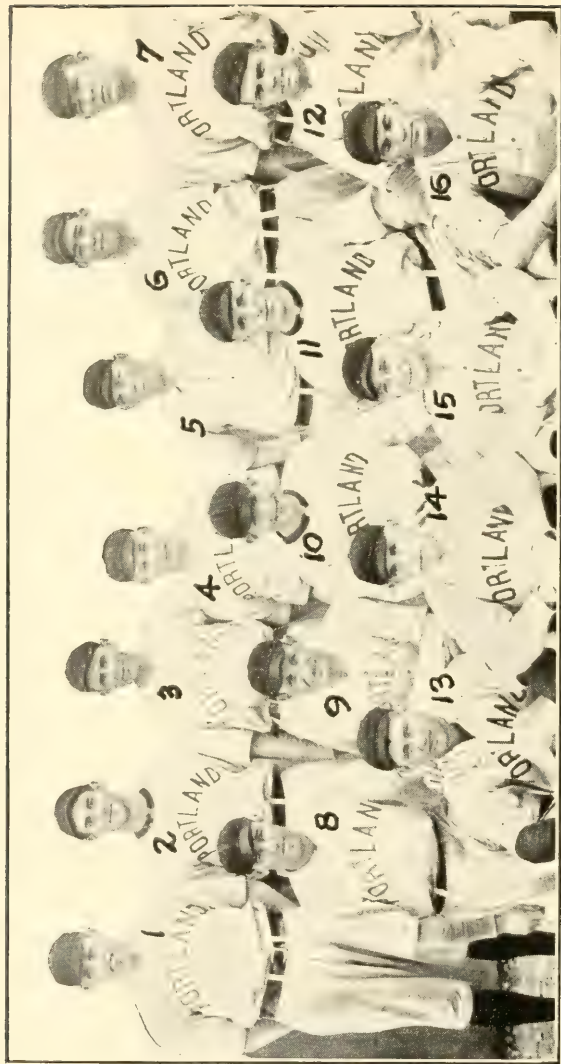

These met on Saturday, the following day. There were important questions to be settled before the committee could enter upon a final conference, and after these had been agreed upon, it was deemed best to meet next at Cincinnati for conference on the following Tuesday. The convened bodies were both so assured that there would be peace in Base Ball that they did not care to have the matter postponed over the holiday season.

At the meeting in Cincinnati the Federal League, after a session of two days with the National Commission, withdrew fully from Base Ball and the war was ended.

The principal provisions of the peace agreement were that all Federal League players were made eligible to play in Organized Base Ball. This should be understood thoroughly by the fact that Organized Base Ball did not agree to provide engagements for the Federal League players, but did agree not to prevent them from obtaining positions where they could.

The Federal League assumed all the contracts of its clubs as a league and not as individual clubs. That placed the disposal of the players in the hands of H. F. Sinclair, who had been the principal promoter for the Newark club, and one of the principals for the circuit.

H. F. Sinclair of the Newark Federal League club and Charles Weighman of the Chicago Federal League club were permitted to purchase the Chicago National League club from Charles P. Taft, if possible to do so.

Philip Ball of St. Louis and others were permitted to purchase the St. Louis American League club from Robert P. Hedges, if possible to do so.

Certain reimbursements were to be made to the Ward interests in the Federal League and to the Pittsburgh Federal League club.

The readjustment of the International League circuit, which had been most seriously affected of any minor league by the Base Ball war, was left to the consideration of a committee. Temporarily, the Baltimore and Buffalo Federal League clubs were left to make terms as best they could. The franchise of the Buffalo Federal League club had been declared forfeit by the Federal League circuit as well as that of the Kansas City Club.

Concerning the agreement, August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, said:

"The peace agreement was an absolute victory for Organized Ball in the Base Ball war. The Federal League has been after us for several months to make some sort of arrangement which would let them out of their costly experiments. When we came to New York for the National League meeting we did not expect anything of this kind, but the Federals sought us out. It is the height of folly to say that the Federals have won anything by the peace. They have constantly proclaimed that they were a major league and that there was room for them. Well, they have now admitted that there is no room for them or for any third league, and they have gone out of existence absolutely. Does this decision look much like a Federal victory? Two or three of them are to buy franchises in the major leagues, which they could have done two years ago if they had not thought they could make good as an outside organization. The Federal League has gone out of existence, so it is easy to see where the victory lies."

Annual Meetings

NATIONAL LEAGUE MEETING.

Members of the National League met at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York city on December 14, 1915. All clubs were represented fully at the meeting. The most important disclosure of the first day's session was the announcement by President Tener of the following facts:

"Certain club owners of the National League have met representatives of the Federal League, but there can be no readjustment of conditions without the agreement of the major leagues pending the decision of Judge Landis."

The value of this declaration is that it was the first official statement leading to peace in the Base Ball world. The meeting to which the president of the National League referred was held the Monday night before at the Republican Club in New York city, when club owners of the National League, at an informal dinner, made a tentative agreement with James Gilmore, representing the Federal League in concert with H. F. Sinclair.

Those present at the National League meeting when this statement was made by the president of the organization were: New York club—H. N. Hempstead, N. Ashley Lloyd, C. J. Sullivan, John B. Foster; Boston—James E. Gaffney, R. H. Davis; Brooklyn—C. H. Ebbets, E. J. McKeever; Philadelphia—W. F. Baker; Pittsburgh—Barney Dreyfuss; St. Louis—Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler P. Britton; Chicago—Charles H. Thomas; Cincinnati—August Herrmann, L. H. Widrig, Harry P. Stephens.

Mr. Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh club was appointed a committee of one to journey to Chicago and confer with the American League relative to the information at hand due to the outcome of the dinner at the Republican Club.

The report of the Board of Directors was received and approved and the championship for 1915 was formally allotted to the Philadelphia club. A protest of a game played at Pittsburgh was not allowed. The protest was based on the fact that Barney, a Pittsburgh player, after bunting a ball had touched the ball a second time with his bat on the way to first base.

Barney Dreyfuss, H. N. Hempstead, James E. Gaffney, Charles H. Ebbets and August Herrmann were re-elected members of the Board of Directors. Committees were appointed to frame suitable resolutions on the deaths of Albert G. Spalding and Andrew Freedman, former members of the National League.

In the evening, at the Waldorf-Astoria, Mr. Fred T. Chandler of the Philadelphia club gave a splendidly chosen and delightful dinner to members of the National League that he might fitly celebrate the winning of the championship by Philadelphia after thirty-two years of hard and concerted effort.

At the session of the league, which was held on the following day, resolutions upon the death of Mr. Albert G. Spalding were read and adopted as follows:

Resolved, That the officers and members of the National League of Professional Base Ball Clubs, and all kindred organizations connected and allied with the National Game, have suffered an irreparable loss in the death of one of base ball's pioneers and commanding figures, a former president of the Chicago club and an honorary life member of the National League.

Albert Goodwill Spalding

Resolved, That, when on September 9, 1915, he was removed suddenly from a field of earnest activity, the National Game was bereft of its heroic figure, the "Father and Savior of Base Ball" and the "Greatest Builder" in Base Ball, that the National League lost the inspiring leader among those men who took the first steps toward its organization;

Resolved, That he was in many respects the greatest man the National Game has produced, superlatively great as Player, Manager, Owner, Councilor, the first and greatest missionary and propagandist the game ever had, that he carved his name large and indelibly in the history of the game, which is his monument as long as the sport survives;

Resolved, That the National League will ever continue to cherish his constructive genius and executive ability and respect his memory for its recollections of a kind, genial, sympathetic nature; to admire his rugged integrity, severe honesty and ethical business methods; and that as a further mark of esteem and honor these resolutions be made a part of this league's record and that an engrossed copy be sent to his family.

CHARLES H. EBBETS,
BARNEY DREYFUSS,
HARRY N. HEMPSTEAD.

Well chosen eulogies were passed upon the life of the most remarkable organizer in the history of Base Ball by President John K. Tener, Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club and John B. Foster of the New York club.

Mr. James Toole of the Boston club delivered an impressive eulogy on Mr. Andrew Freedman and resolutions were read and adopted upon his death.

Business during the remainder of the session was purely relative to the internal affairs of the league.

AMERICAN LEAGUE MEETING.

Only a brief session of the American League was held at Chicago, December 15, 1915, owing to the fact that the organization, after hearing the statement made to it by Barney Dreyfuss, committee for the National League, relative to a settlement of Base Ball conditions, immediately appointed a committee to meet the National League and representatives of the Federal League not associated with Organized Base Ball in New York city. It was necessary that this committee should take the train to New York at once and quite all members of the American League departed for the East.

The championship was formally awarded to the Boston club and the remainder of the meeting was devoted purely to the internal affairs of the organization.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION MEETING.

Leagues comprising the National Association of Professional Base Ball Leagues held their annual meeting at San Francisco in November, 1915. In the report of the secretary of the organization, John H. Farrell, of Auburn, N. Y., it was stated that forty leagues qualified for membership at the beginning of the year. These embraced 262 towns and cities in the United States and Canada. In the year previous there were forty-four leagues in the association. Ten of the leagues which applied for membership in 1915 did not begin the season and five that started failed to complete their annual schedules. Of the five, four dropped out and one was disqualified. In one league during the 1915 season 105 games were postponed because of the rain. This organization only played four months of the summer.

In the Class A leagues for 1916 no individual salary limit was fixed, but the league salary limit was placed at $2,800 monthly. Class A leagues cut the number of players eligible to carry from 15 to 14.

Class B leagues reduced the salary limit from $2,000 to $1,800 and the player limit from 14 to 13. Class C leagues left their limit at $1,400 and cut the player limit from 14 to 13. Class D leagues made no change except that the individual salary limit was placed at $135.

The limit date for tendering contracts to players was changed from February 1 to March 1. It was also agreed that all presidents of Class C and Class D leagues shall sign all players according to terms submitted by club owners. Another change provides that hereafter any National Association club shall be privileged to cancel drafts from clubs of lower classification during the five-day period of the drafting season of the particular classification.

M. H. Sexton was again re-elected president, succeeding himself for a period of five years. T. H. Murnane was elected vice-president. Members of the National Board of Arbitration are: T. M. Chivington, Chicago; Dr. F. R. Carson, South Bend, Ind.; Allen T. Baum, San Francisco; E. G. Barrow, New York; R. H. Baugh, Birmingham, Alabama; E. J. Hallon, Sioux City; M. E. Justice, Keokuk; R. L. Blewett, Seattle. The next meeting of the association will be held at New Orleans.

It was voted that any player in any game, participating either in or out of the regular playing season, with an ineligible or disqualified player shall be declared ineligible to play on any association club and shall be liable to fine, suspension or other penalty at the discretion of the National Board of Arbitration.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE MEETING.

Members of the International League met in New York City, at the Hotel McAlpin, December 13. At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced by President Barrow that the future of the Harrisburg club had not been decided upon, but that it had been agreed that the franchise of the Richmond club should remain in Richmond, Va.

It was asserted that the International League had options on Base Ball territory in New England, in case it was decided best to transfer any clubs of the circuit to that territory. The cities in which it was suggested that the International League might operate were Hartford and Springfield, Mass. There was also intimation that the territory in Worcester, Mass., might be made available.

It was deemed best to adjourn until January 17, that the major leagues might have opportunity to hold their meetings, after which the International League could be in fit condition to arrange for the 1916 playing season with better knowledge.

The Chicago City Series

Post-season games, without a Chicago city series, would be an unheard-of Base Ball event. The Chicago city series of 1915 was not quite so interesting as some which had preceded it, and yet it exceeded in interest predictions which had been made for it.

In the first place Chicago Base Ball enthusiasts had been much disappointed by the failure of both of their clubs to win in their respective leagues. The Chicago American League club had been greatly strengthened for the season. At least such was the presumption of the generous owner of that team who had expended money freely to place a high-class championship aggregation on the diamond. Like many an instance of prior history it was ascertained that it is not always money that will put together a championship team and the White Sox, after a fair start, began to retrograde. When their progress was backward, instead of forward, it did not take long to ascertain that the team was strong only in spots and that some of the players, who had been expected to be able to hold a championship pace, were only erratic workers who could perform on one day better than any of their rivals and on the next quite worse than any of their rivals.

The Cubs at one time during the fight for the National League championship were in front and there seemed to be some hope that they might win the flag. Like other clubs that had been leaders in National League races for a period of years, the Cubs finally met with reverses and dropped out of the struggle. Hence the fact that both the Chicago clubs had fallen upon evil days naturally might be expected to have had a great deal of adverse influence on the games.

Under the conditions it is probable that the attendance at this series was greater than it would have been at any other city in which there are two major league clubs.

The series was won by the American League team, which was better, and played better Base Ball than the National League team. That is about all that can be said of the struggle. Perhaps it is quite enough. In the five games which were played the Cubs really showed to better advantage than had been deemed possible by some of their most ardent followers. They won one game. In the other games, except one, they gave the White Sox a good fight.

The scores are as follows:

The St. Louis City Series

	Played.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.	Tied.
Browns	6	4	1	.300	1
Cardinals	6	1	4	.200	1

The city series of 1915 was won by the Browns. This was something of a surprise to the best citizens of several centers of Base Ball interest in the United States. Incidentally, it was something of a surprise to the St. Louis National League players, who had come to the belief that they were a little better than the Browns, even if they failed to win the National League championship. The Cardinals, as a whole, were a team too well satisfied with themselves all the 1915 season. On some days they played beautifully and on others they played exactly as a lot of old timers will play who are serving their contracts and not much of anything else.

The scores of the games are as follows:

Major League Statistics for 1915

No game of record innings was played by either of the major organizations in 1915, yet, oddly enough, the season began by Marquard, then of the Giants, pitching a no-hit game against Brooklyn on the second day of the Base Ball year. It was the first appearance of Marquard in the regular championship race. As a queer finish to the career of Marquard in 1915, the month of September found him a member of the very club which he had shut out earlier in the season. Inability to hold a game after he seemed to have it won had resulted in his departure from the Giants.

In addition to Marquard, Chicago's pitcher, Lavender, pitched a no-hit game, and, quite as the gentleman who deals out the irony of fate might find it to his satisfaction, this game was pitched against the Giants. So it was that the Giants were possessors both of a no-hit pitcher and a no-hit record. Not a pitcher in the American League succeeded in pitching a no-hit game, although there were quite a number who kept players of opposing teams to a single hit.

On four different times Alexander, pitcher for the Philadelphia National League club, pitched a one-hit game. It would almost seem that fate might have been kind enough to have given him at least one no-hit game after so much effort in that direction, but Alexander was not to be that fortunate. Perhaps it is just as well for it is Base Ball superstition that pitchers with no-hit games are unlucky. This, like most superstitions, does not carry out in truth, but that does not alter the fact that the superstition exists. What Alexander did, and which will always have an important bearing on the Base Ball statistics of 1915, was to shut his opponents out twelve times. That is success enough for one pitcher without worrying about a no-hit game.

The nearest approach to the record which was made by the Giants and Pittsburghs for extra innings was a nineteen inning game between Chicago and Brooklyn. The Chicago club led the league with the greatest number of hits against New York pitchers until New York tied the Chicago mark by the same number of hits—24—against Davis of Boston. It seemed as if the Giants figured in almost all of the sensational feats of the National League season, including their ability to end in last place, the first time that a New York team had done that under the management of McGraw, and the result of a combination of accidents to players and stupid Base Ball on the part of the veterans of the team, whose wits seemed to have gone wool gathering.

In the American League the longest game ran nineteen innings. This was played by the Chicagos and the Cleveland's. St. Louis made 21 hits in one game and Washington batted Sheehan of the Athletics for the same number.

There were not so many shut-out games in the American League as in the National and, collectively, there were fewer sensational performances. As a matter of fact this was somewhat surprising, because there were admittedly weak clubs in the American League which were never in the race for the championship, but all of which seemed to be able to play just well enough to keep their stronger brethren well behaved whenever they met them on the ball field.

It will be noticed in the statistics which follow that the Chicago National League Club has taken part, in its history, in eight games of seventeen innings or over, more than any club, except one, the Chicago Americans, in the history of Base Ball. New York and Pittsburgh hold the National League record, with a game of 21 innings, but twice the Chicago club has played in a game of 20 innings, winning once and tying the other. Chicago has won two 19 inning games, one 18 inning game and two 17 inning games, in addition to tying one 17 inning contest.

In the American League Chicago is quite as proficient in playing extra inning games, but the record lacks a game of 20 innings, as the best that the Chicagos have done in that organization is to win a contest of 19 innings. They have also won one of 18 innings and three of 17 innings, in addition to losing a 17 inning fight and tying two. That makes their total of high extra inning games eight, the same as for the Cubs, with the latter team much better, in view of the fact that it never lost a high inning game, even if tied once.

There is a big difference in the record of games of many hits in the National League in 1915 as compared with 1914. The most hits that were made by any one club in 1914 was 19. In 1915 the record is 24 for two clubs. There was more, less generally, in the National League in 1915 than there was in 1914. Now, if the theory is true that batting makes games interesting there should have been more interest in the fight for the championship the year before. It is very doubtful if there was, but it is a fact that the uncertainty of affairs generally throughout the world so perturbed the minds of thousands of good American citizens in 1915 that they forsook the study of Base Ball statistics temporarily to ponder over market reports or read the lists of casualties in the murderous war abroad.

The following are the statistics for the year :

Pittsburgh	11	4	8	11	34
New York	12	7	9	8	36

Following are the Official records of National League pitchers who participated in fifteen or more games during the season of 1915. In computing this record all runs scored were charged against the pitcher except those resulting from fielding errors and passed balls. No runs were charged that scored after chances had been offered fielders to retire the side. The percentage is based on the least number of earned runs per nine-inning game. To arrive at this percentage the total earned runs are divided by the number of innings pitched; then multiplied by nine to find the pitcher's average effectiveness for a complete game.

Mobile and New Orleans played a sixteen-inning tie game, 5-5, September 4.

Pitcher Ross of Chattanooga struck out twelve men in the game won by his team from Atlanta, September 20.

In a seven-inning game, September 18, Chattanooga defeated Atlanta, Clark shutting out the Atlanta batsmen without a hit or run.

A triple play by Perry, third baseman; Flick, second baseman, and Northern, first baseman, of Mobile, was the feature of that team's victory over Chattanooga, August 29.

Albany defeated Syracuse, 6-5, in nineteen innings, June 24.

Binghamton and Albany played fourteen innings to a 4-4 tie, May 27.

Wilkes-Barre did not get a hit off pitcher Parsons of Troy, June 12. Troy won, 2-0.

The Syracuse club made quite a jump in batting, from seventh place in 1914 to first in 1915.

Wilkes-Barre and Syracuse played seventeen innings, July 14. Wilkes-Barre winning, 2-1.

Fifteen innings were played by Binghamton and Albany, May 29, Binghamton winning, 10-7.

After playing fifteen innings to a tie, 1-1, darkness ended the contest between Elmira and Utica, August 28.

Pitcher Meyers of Wilkes-Barre shut out Albany without a hit or run, and only one man got to first base, on called balls, August 25.

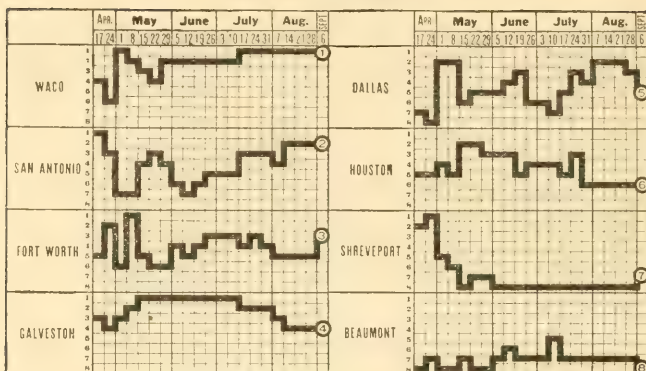

Elmira defeated Utica, 1-0, in fifteen innings, August 6, and on August 18 won from Albany by the same score and the same number of innings.

Outfielder Kay of Binghamton was the chief run-getter of the league with ninety-eight to his credit. Outfielder Hunter of Elmira had nine less.

The league's best base stealer was Maisel, outfielder of the Scranton club, with fifty-seven. Irving of Binghamton ranked second with forty-four.

That there was a big improvement in batting over the previous year was shown by the fact that twenty-one men secured an average of .300 or over in 1915, as against seven in 1914.

Reilly's wild pitch record of twelve in thirty-one games topped the league.

London got only one hit off pitcher Howick of St. Thomas, and was shut out, 3-0, July 8.

Pitcher Dougherty of Hamilton shut out London without a safe hit, winning his game, 2-1, July 27.

Bullock of Ottawa averaged a fraction of over four times at the bat in each of the 108 games he played.

Fourteen innings, with the score 2-2, was the result of the game between St. Thomas and Guelph, August 10.

The sacrifice hitters of the league were led by Whitcraft of London, with twenty-eight in ninety-two games.

Murphy and Grieves of the Guelph club played in 109 games each, more than any other player in the league.

Burrill, the leading batsman in the league, with a percentage of .344, was forty-fifth in the list in 1914, with .265.

Second baseman Grieves of the Guelph club up to July 29 played thirty-two consecutive games without an error.

Fuller of Ottawa made the greatest number of extra bases, thirty-three, leading Burrill, the premier batsman, by one.

Outfielder Kopp of the St. Thomas club led the league in stolen bases, with forty-two to his credit in seventy games.

Besides striking out nine men, pitcher Dougherty of Hamilton held Brantford to one hit, and won his game, 2-1, June 3.

Shortstop Whitcraft of London accepted thirteen chances offered him in a game against Guelph, June 3, without an error.

According to the number of games pitched, Ross of Ottawa had the best strike-out record, having 137 in twenty-three games.

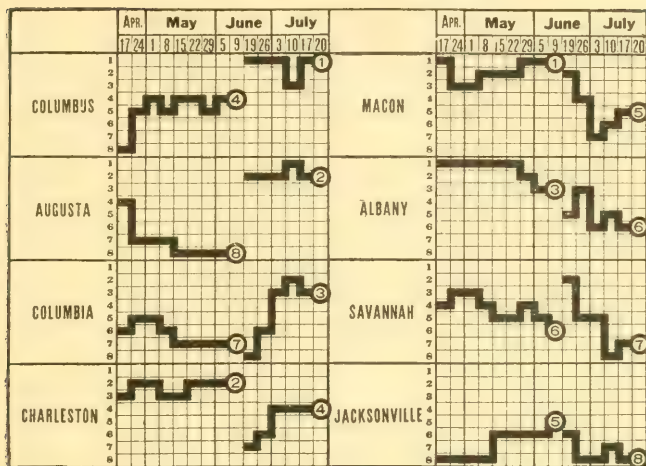

A home run by Powers, outfielder of Ottawa, scored a victory for his team in a thirteen-inning game with Guelph, May 24, the score being 8-7.

Seventeen innings were played by London and Ottawa, June 8, before London was declared the winner, 3-2. Graham, pitcher of the winning team, allowed but seven hits during the game.

In the game between Guelph and London on August 23, not a run was scored by either team until the thirteenth inning, when each tallied. In the fourteenth inning London put over the winning run.

Murphy of Guelph and Fuller of Ottawa had a close race for the leading run getter in the league, the former having sixty-six in 109 games and the latter sixty-five in 93 games.

Augusta was shut out, 1-0, and made only one hit off pitcher Redding of Columbus, June 14.

Outfielder Chancey of Macon scored five runs on one hit and one time at bat, having secured his base four times on called balls.

Pitcher Roth of Augusta in the game with Savannah, July 9, struck out nine men, made the only two hits credited against pitcher Causey, and drove in the only two runs for his team.

For the first time in two seasons the colors of pitcher Hawkins of Columbus were lowered by Augusta, June 24. Third baseman Champlin made a three-base hit, sending in three runs, which won the game.

Pitcher Myers of Raleigh secured the strike-out record with 263 to his credit.

Charlotte lost twelve straight games, won the thirteenth, and lost the fourteenth.

The sacrifice hitters of the league during the season were led by first baseman Mack of Raleigh.

Hickman, outfielder of Asheville, led the league in scoring runs, two and three base hits, home runs and stolen bases.

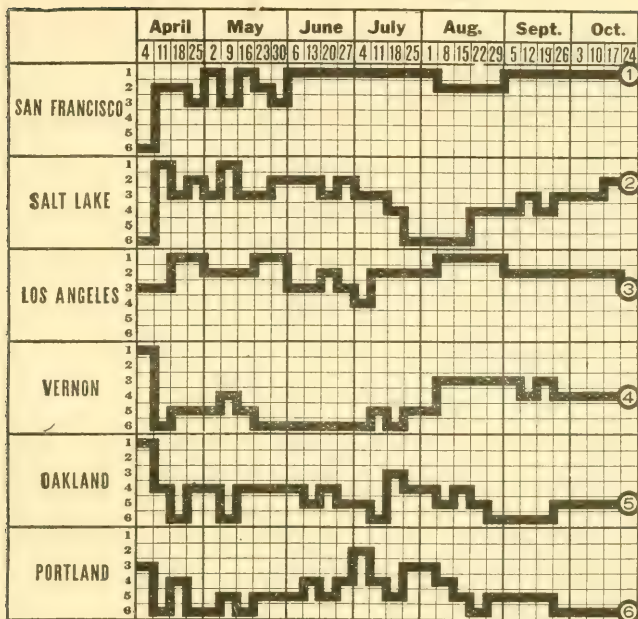

Pitcher Fortune of Asheville struck out twenty-one batsmen and allowed only eight hits in a twelve-inning game against Winston, April 24, yet lost, 5-4.

Ray, the Greensboro pitcher, shut out Raleigh without a hit or a run, and struck out fifteen batsmen, August 12. It was Ray's third no-hit game in as many seasons.

The Greensboro club made a new record for the league on August 12, 13, 14. It shut out Raleigh in three nine-inning games, consecutively, and did not allow a Raleigh player to reach third base and only seven to second.

Two remarkable games were played by Durham and Raleigh, July 5. In the morning Raleigh won, 3-2, in fourteen innings. In the afternoon darkness stopped the game after twenty-one innings, the result being a tie, 2-2.

Mails of Seattle struck out twelve Aberdeen batsmen, yet lost his game, May 7.

Pitcher Noyes of Spokane, July 9, disposed of Vancouver without a safe hit, Spokane winning, 11-1.

Outfielder Wilson of the Tacoma club was the best base stealer in the league, having fifty-four to his credit.

Tacoma produced the best waiter in the league in Johnson, who reached first base seventy-four times on called balls.

A triple play by shortstop Raymond and first baseman Brooks of Seattle was the feature of the game between Seattle and Tacoma, August 21.

In a game between Aberdeen and Seattle, May 9, Harkness, pitcher of Aberdeen, shut out his opponents without a safe hit, his team winning, 4-0.

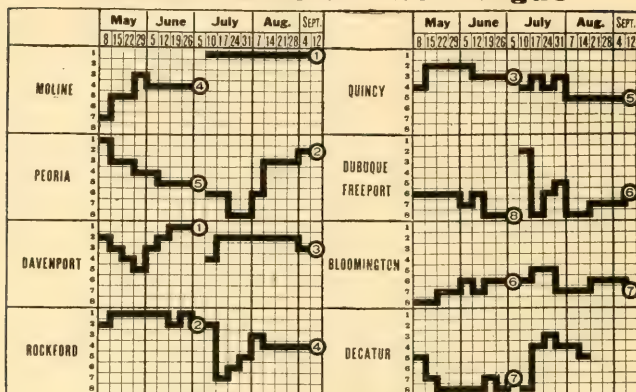

Guigni of Seattle, like in 1914 when a member of the Ballard club, led the third basemen with an average of .959, the same as in the previous year.

Fourteen innings were played by Spokane and Tacoma, May 19, when Tacoma was declared the winner, 5-4. The same clubs played another fourteen inning game June 22, and Tacoma again won, 6-5.

The first week of the season brought out a great pitchers' battle between McIvor, then with Tacoma, and Harkness of Aberdeen. Tacoma won in twelve innings, 2-0, and Aberdeen made only two hits and Tacoma three.

Pitcher Joe McGinnity of Tacoma showed a sample of the "old stuff" against Aberdeen, May 15. The veteran allowed but two scratch hits, did not give a base on balls, struck out seven batsmen, and won his game, 6-0.

GRAND NATIONAL ALL-AMERICA BASE BALL TEAM

Players on National Championship Teams who have played in one position in 50 games (pitchers 25 games) or over and whose combined records of Fielding and Batting (pitchers' record includes Percentage of Victories, Fielding and Batting) rank the highest in each position covering the period of forty-five years from the commencement of Professional Base Ball, in 1871, to 1915, inclusive.

[NOTE.—The All-America Teams are made up of players in Champion Teams and not necessarily on best records.]

*Wm. Keeler played center field on the Brooklyn team of 1899, and in this position had a record in fielding of .970 and in batting of .376, a total of 1.346, which would entitle him to the center field position on the Grand National "All-America" Team, but as he had a higher record as right fielder of the Baltimore team in 1896, the center field was given to Hugh Duffy of Boston with the next highest record of 1.336. A clerical error was made in the Record Book of 1908, in placing Hugh Jennings' name in the shortstop position on the Grand National "All-America" Team, with his splendid record of .943 in fielding and .386 in batting, totaling 1.329, instead of Geo. Wright, with his still more remarkable record of .940 in fielding and .422 in batting, totaling 1.362.

Eight stolen bases in an inning.—In Washington vs. Cleveland A. L. game, July 19, 1915, at Cleveland. Naturally, catcher O'Neill, Cleveland, comes in for criticism, but see what the official scorer says:

"Moeller walked. He started to steal. Rip Hagerman started to pitch to first, changed his mind, and made the peg to second. That was a balk and Moeller was safe at the midway cushion, getting credit for a stolen base. Foster fled to Chapman. Milan was passed. Rip snoozed again and gave Moeller such a big lead that Danny had no trouble stealing third. O'Neill made the peg to second to get Milan. Danny kept going and added the theft of home to his steals of second and third, Milan being safe at second. Shanks walked. Barbare and Hagerman took another nap and Milan stole third while Rip held the ball.

"That put runners on first and third and the spectators, all 700 of them, convulsed with enjoyment, expected to see the double steal, but Gandil cut in with a triple to left-center, Milan and Shanks scoring and Chick coming home on Graney's wild return.

"Good-night, Hagerman, and enter Bumpus Sam Jones. Connolly fled to Graney, but Ainsmith singled and stole, taking third on O'Neill's poor peg. McBride walked and the double steal went through, Ainsmith scoring. Kirke pegged the ball against McBride's shoulder trying to nip the Nationals' captain at second and George continued to third. Southworth pegged wild trying to get him at that station and McBride tallied. Johnson fled to Smith for the final out."

EASTERN COLLEGE BASE BALL.

BY EDWARD B. MOSS, NEW YORK.

High class play marked the work of a majority of the Eastern college base ball teams during the season of 1915. With schedules ranging from twenty to thirty games, several of the 'varsity nines showed a winning percentage well over .800. Since no intercollegiate league existed, the award of an Eastern championship is to some extent a matter of personal opinion. In many quarters the Harvard nine was credited with the mythical championship honors, due to the fact that the Crimson team played twenty-eight games against the strongest nines of the section with the loss of but five matches. This high percentage of victories in a long schedule, which included the winning of the Triangular League title, in which Princeton, Yale and Harvard met, was generally conceded to be one of the best showings on Eastern college diamonds during the season.

High-class play was not confined to the Triangular League, however, for a number of the other nines representing Eastern colleges made records on the diamond that compared favorably with those of the winning team in that association. Tufts finished the season with 17 victories, 1 tie and 2 defeats in a schedule of twenty games, while Syracuse made a showing equally as impressive winning 18 games, tying 2 and losing but 4 out of twenty-four played.

A study of the records show that a majority of the teams bearing the colors of the leading colleges and universities of the section won more than fifty per cent. of their contests and some exceeded this margin by many points. Harvard's long string of victories included wins over Princeton, Yale, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Virginia, Holy Cross and Navy. Tufts defeated Georgetown, Brown, Dartmouth, Yale, Wesleyan, Trinity, Navy and Fordham.

The Army nine with 18 victories out of twenty-one games played gave another remarkable exhibition of high-class college base ball play, for the Cadets defeated among others Navy, Harvard, Georgetown, Holy Cross and Penn State, notwithstanding that these teams were at the top of their form when they invaded West Point. Brown also played a winning game all season, easily capturing a large proportion of its contests, including one or more games from Amherst, Dartmouth, Yale, Harvard, Princeton and the Chinese Collegians from Honolulu.

The Navy, despite its defeat by the Army in the annual Service game, easily defeated a majority of the teams that invaded Annapolis, including Cornell, Notre Dame, Georgetown, Pennsylvania and Georgia. Columbia played at a .684 gait, defeating among the leading teams met, Colgate, Pennsylvania, Williams and Lafayette. Yale, with a much longer schedule, maintained about the same average, and during the season vanquished Princeton, Harvard, Amherst, Navy, Brown, Virginia, Columbia and Pennsylvania in one or more games.

The Princeton team fell a little below this percentage, but the Tigers succeeded in numbering among their victims Yale, Cornell, Colgate, Virginia, North Carolina, Notre Dame and Dartmouth. Cornell got a poor start on the Southern training trip, but once back on Northern diamonds more than made up for its early defeats by winning games from Yale, Colgate, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth and Princeton, in addition to taking two out of the three contests played with Michigan. Syracuse was one of the few teams that played west of the Alleghenies. On the Western trip the two games with Michigan, at Ann Arbor, resulted in tie scores, the first going to eleven innings, with the score, 0-0. The second game was also an extra-inning affair, twelve innings, 2-2 being the score when rain intervened. The Michigan "Aggies" made a strong effort to conquer the visitors, but had to succumb in eleven innings, 4-3. West Point's formidable team was another victim of Syracuse, the latter winning by 1-0. Captain Nichols, Slater and Turnure were the mainstays in the box.

Amherst's leading victories were over Wesleyan, Williams, Massachusetts Aggies, Yale and Dartmouth. Holy Cross defeated Georgetown, Columbia, Fordham, Trinity, Pennsylvania, Colby, Rhode Island State and Massachusetts Aggies. The Dartmouth nine played one of the longest and hardest schedules of the spring and emerged with victories over Yale, Williams, Massachusetts Aggies and Vermont, in addition to others less important.

In the same section Colby and Bates played at a faster clip. The former team captured the Maine Intercollegiate title. Bates tied and defeated Colby in two of the games of their series, in addition to winning contests from Harvard, Maine, Bowdoin and New Hampshire State. Trinity was another of the New England teams to win a majority of the games of the season, taking into camp Williams, Wesleyan, New York University and Bowdoin at least once.

Among the New York and New Jersey college teams, Fordham won from the Army, Columbia, Dartmouth, Notre Dame and Swarthmore. Seton Hall proved too fast for Colgate, Holy Cross, Manhattan College, Niagara and the Chinese University on one occasion at least. Colgate, when at its best, defeated Syracuse, Navy, Rutgers, Hamilton and Rochester.

Further South the university nines that met Eastern colleges fared exceedingly well. Virginia won close to two-thirds of her games. Cornell, Michigan, Brown, Amherst and North Carolina all falling before the diamond play of the Virginians. Georgetown's list of victories included wins over Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Williams, Holy Cross and Fordham.

The two New England prep school teams, Exeter and Andover, both had nines of exceptional caliber, each winning a big percentage of the games played. Exeter had slightly the better record and closed the season by defeating Andover, 10 to 2, in the annual contest between the two academies.

A special feature of the college base ball season was the visit of the Chinese University team of Honolulu under the direction of Nat Strong of New York. The Chinese nine, as in past years, played a number of the leading teams of the Pacific Coast, Middle West and the East, and deserves special mention in view of the class of base ball shown by the team from the near Orient. These international intercollegiate base ball tours are becoming more frequent each year and are a big factor in the spreading of the fame of base ball around the world. The University of Chicago team, just returned from Japan and the Philippines as this article goes to press, brings word that the Waseda University nine of Japan is planning to play another series of games in the States during 1916, which it is expected will be as successful as was the previous tour of the Japanese collegians.

When Count Okuma, premier of Japan, and Doctor Wu Ting Fang, formerly Chinese minister to Washington, lay aside their political duties to entertain an American college base ball team, the significance of athletics is surely manifest in the Orient. Scores of other statesmen and educators throughout the Far East believe that the salvation of their race is to be obtained through American university athletic ideals. So, when the University of Chicago sent out its representative group of base ball players this past fall, as in the fall of 1910, they not only did much to strengthen international relations, but they have done the work of a hundred missionaries right on the athletic field. A picture and an account of the trip will be found on pages 412 and 413.

Team play and ability to score batters, once the latter got on base, was the feature of Harvard's game. In both batting and fielding other 'varsity combinations made better records than the Crimson, but none showed a finer balanced team or more inside play. In team batting the Army nine took first honors, with Tufts second, Navy third, Fordham fourth and Columbia fifth. Harvard was tenth on the list, with Princeton twelfth and Pennsylvania fifteenth.

Gerhardt of the Army team was the leading batter among the players who figured in twenty games or more, with an average of a trifle more than .400. Adams of the Navy was a close second and Babbington of Brown third. Watt of Columbia was the leading run-getter, with Stafford of Tufts second and Gerhardt of the Army third. In base stealing the West Pointer also ranked first, with twenty-three stolen bases in twenty-one games.

Among the pitchers, Whittaker, Tufts; Neyland, Army; Deyo and Link, Princeton; Way, Yale; Regan, Cornell; Brown and Robinson, Amherst, all stood out as star boxmen, and their twirling was responsible for many of the victories scored by their respective teams. Neyland of the Army had a remarkable run of consecutive wins: Whittaker won nine out of ten games he pitched, while Link of Princeton, with his fourteen strike-outs against Williams College batters, was at first thought to have established a new Tiger record. A search of the box scores of past years proved, however, that pitcher Young of the Princeton nine of 1891 fanned seventeen Lafayette batters on April 25 of that year.

While the selection of an All-Eastern team is always a matter of opinion, the problem at the end of the 1915 season was unusually puzzling, due to the wealth of high class material. Far more than the ordinary number of high caliber players were available for almost every position on the mythical combination and the team as named could be opposed, on paper at least, by several other teams of almost equal strength. A consensus of the choices of the various writers on college base ball shows the following players favored for the first team:

THE WESTERN CONFERENCE SEASON.

BY A. H. BERNDT, ATHLETIC DIRECTOR, INDIANA UNIVERSITY.

Base ball in the "Big Nine," or Western Conference, was of a high order in 1915, despite the bad weather conditions, which kept most of the universities from playing their full schedules.

The University of Illinois, many times champions of the Conference, again demonstrated its superiority under the careful teaching of George Huff. Illinois had most of her veterans left from the 1914 champions and proved that they could deliver the goods in consecutive years. They lost but one game, which was probably due more to the excellent pitching of Juul of Northwestern University than anything else. Illinois had a wonderful fighting spirit as a team, which was always kept at a high pitch by its capable catcher, Bradley, who caught practically every game played throughout the season. Bradley was not only a good receiver, but a good thrower, base-runner and hitter, and possessed the knack of steadying his team at critical moments. Bane, who performed at the initial sack for Illinois and batted in clean-up, was probably the other big asset of his team, and his hitting at opportune times brought victory for his school.

Wisconsin earned second place and is deserving of much praise for the manner in which it performed. The season of 1915 found many new faces in the line-up, but many thought that the "Badgers" presented a better article of base ball than they had for several seasons past. In Captain Herzog at first base this team had a leader who was the equal of any in the Conference. He was shifted from shortstop to first sack at the beginning of the season, and performed in big league style throughout the year. In Moon, Wisconsin had one of the steadiest and most capable pitchers in the Conference. He never seemed to lose his nerve in the most trying situations. Owing to the illness of Galvin, who had been counted on to share a part of the work in the box, Moon had to be called upon for practically all of the work for the season. Aside from good pitching, Wisconsin had a well-balanced team in the field and usually managed to force enough runs across to win most of her games.

Northwestern University probably had the strongest base ball team that has represented the institution in a decade. It was ably coached by Murphy and "Wee" Willie McGill. A large share of the honors might rightfully be attributed to the excellent pitching of Junl, who was considered by many critics to be the best in his position in the Conference. Hightower, however, was a bright and shining light at all times, and kept his team fighting. At times Northwestern appeared to have one of the strongest hitting teams in the Conference, and had it been a steadier aggregation, might have finished even higher in the percentage column. As it was, the team has the honor of being the only one that was able to win from the University of Illinois.

Iowa State is given fourth place, but was considered as strong as any team in the Conference, with Ingham and Deardorff right- and left-hand pitchers, and rated very highly. In Jacobson and Snyder, Iowa had two players of unusual ability. These two men, along with good pitching, did much to keep the team high up at all times. Several shifts were necessary in the lineup throughout the season, which probably had a tendency to unsteady the team. Iowa will have a strong nucleus left over, from which it should make a strong bid for honors in 1916.

Ohio State University had a much better team than its position in the fifth place might indicate. A series of accidents lost to the Ohioans two of their best pitchers. Previous to the loss of these men, Ohio had been traveling along with a clean record. It was a well-balanced team, and was always stimulated to give its best efforts through the able leadership of Captain Cherry. Cherry was an opportune hitter, and did much to keep his team in the lead at all times. This is another instance where the captain had to be shifted from his old position at second base to first, but the shift did not seem to worry him at any time. The team showed a wonderful fighting spirit under a heavy handicap and the games lost were usually by a very close margin.

Purdue University ranks sixth, which position is considered good by many critics owing to the fact that Coach Patterson did not have any natural stars to choose from at the beginning of the season. Finn at short and Walter behind the bat were probably the most dependable men for this institution. Purdue had a good fielding team, but could not manage to get hits at times when they were needed.

The University of Chicago fell lower in the percentage column than for a number of years. This was quite a surprise to many followers of college base ball, for with DesJardien working his senior year in the pitching role, it was thought that he would keep up his good work of previous seasons. However, the Chicago team was always a hard one to defeat and the University fans were given a good treat in college base ball. Some of the strong men were Cole, Skull, Kixmiller, and Cavin, the latter sharing honors with "Slip" Cogdal, captain of Illinois, in being the smallest players in the Conference. They both made up for their lack of stature with playing ability.

Minnesota shared a tie in the percentage column with Chicago. The team was at all times a hard fighting aggregation, but lacked the something that enabled it to get runs. Some of the strongest players, who probably would rank with any in the Conference, were Lawler at second; Quist, first base, and Solon, behind the bat.

Indiana occupied the last position in the Conference. Like Ohio State University, this institution lost some of its strongest players early in the season. The loss was keenly felt in the hitting department. Indiana had the reputation of losing more games by a margin of one run than any team in the Conference. The team was made up of weak hitters, which made it necessary to hold last place. Some of the strongest players were Schlemmer, Shively and Gard.

An umpire, who has worked in many of the college games, stated that as a rule the teams were fielding very strongly, and, in some respects, he thought that base-running had improved over past years. However, he felt that hitting as a rule was not up to the standard, as compared to previous years, which might be attributed to a better class of pitching. The college pitchers have come to have better control than formerly.

Base ball in the Western Conference has proven popular in all places excepting those cities having league teams. Just at present the game is suffering on account of repeated complaints of professionalism. For the present the sport has been placed on probation, and many fear that base ball, as an intercollegiate sport, will be dropped unless the players make a stronger effort to keep the game clear of professionalism.

The Conference standing for 1915 was as follows:

NORTHWEST COLLEGE CONFERENCE BASE BALL.

BY JAMES J. RICHARDSON, OFFICIAL UMPIRE.

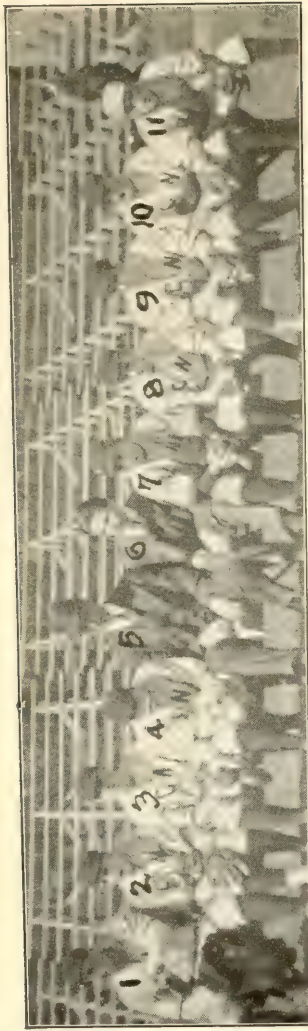

Never in the history of college base ball in the Northwest has such a successful season as was enjoyed in 1915 been experienced.

Washington State College, at Pullman, under the leadership of Coach Johnny Bender, annexed the Conference title in the championship series with Oregon Agricultural College, after two of the most exciting and best played games ever witnessed on Rodgers Field.

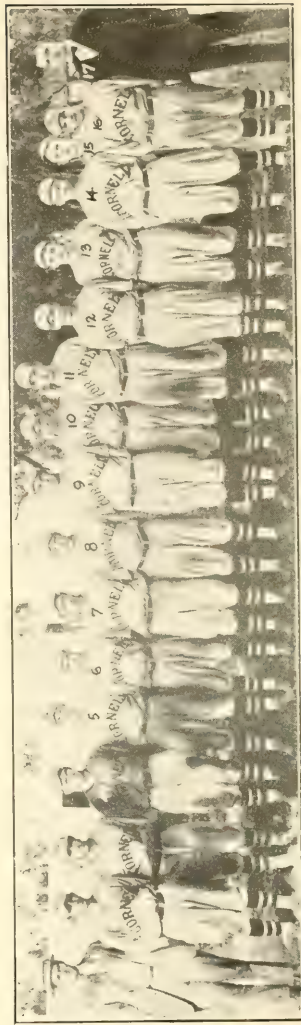

With the championship of the Eastern division secure, the Washington Staters entered into the battle with a grim determination to do or die, and the Oregon "Aggies" fought back every inch.

Manager Everett May and Captain Doble of the latter team had their men keyed up to championship form, and the two straight victories that Washington State won will long live in the memory of those who were fortunate enough to watch the battles.

It was a pitcher's duel from start to finish. Al Hartman, the diminutive port-sider of Washington State, and "Bickie" Williams of the Oregon "Aggies" were opposed to each other in both games, Hartman being the victor.

Washington won the first, 4 to 2, in nine innings. The second game went thirteen innings and the score was tied three times during that time. With a man on third and two down for Washington in the thirteenth, Williams uncorked a wild heave and the title passed into the possession of Washington State.

The big State championship games in Oregon proved more or less of a disappointment. The University of Oregon, under the leadership of Hugo Bezdek, seemed unable to get going, and made a dismal showing in the two games against the Oregon "Aggies." Bezdek's material was very green and the Pittsburg scout forecasted a drubbing from the "Aggies."

Captain Goble, who practically coached the base ball squad for the "Aggies," had the best team that ever represented the institution. "Bickie" Williams pitched superb ball, and "Chub" Weller's receiving was gilt edge. The team, as a whole, did nobly. "Heinie" Loof's hitting for the "Aggies" played a prominent part in the team's victories.

Coach Gilmore Dobie was unable to gather a winning aggregation for the University of Washington. The University of Idaho, under the leadership of "Pink" Griffiths, played some close and exciting games with Washington State and, on the whole, made a fairly good showing.

Whitman College, at Walla Walla, was up and fighting all the time, but couldn't manage to overcome the strong teams that represented the other institutions in the Conference.

Some promising material loomed up during the season. The Portland Coast League team grabbed Al Hartman of Washington State and the great little hurler will have a chance in professional ranks at the close of the 1916 college season.

Scouts were looking over Lyle Bigbee and Dick Nelson at Oregon, "Heinie" Loof at Corvallis, and several others also have been mentioned as being under the same scrutinizing eyes.

With Vincent Borleske at Whitman, Hugo Bezdek at Oregon, Dietz at Pullman, Radermacher at Idaho and new coaches to be appointed at Washington and Corvallis, the season of 1916 promises to be the equal, if not even better, than last season. These coaches are the cream of the West, and ought to be able to mold their machines into winning aggregations.

COLLEGE BASE BALL IN THE SOUTH.

BY INNIS BROWN, ATLANTA, GA.

In the matter of standard of play the 1915 college base ball season in the South will bear comparison favorably with the records of other years. All of the larger institutions turned out representative teams, and many of the smaller ones were represented by nines that pushed the leaders hard.

As evidence of the fact that the different teams were pretty well matched, the fact may be cited that no team won a clear claim to the championship. Of course, where several are considered possibilities for the title, it is next to impossible to arrange a schedule that will furnish a clear-cut winner, since the season will not permit all contenders to meet. However, among the acknowledged stronger teams in 1915, the results of play left things in a badly muddled condition insofar as deciding which team was the strongest.

Here is a bit of proof of the situation: Georgia, Tech, Alabama Poly, and Alabama were possibly the best in the South. Alabama Poly defeated Georgia two of three games; Tech, in turn, trimmed Poly in their series: yet Georgia came along and won from Tech handily. Alabama was defeated by Tech, but held Georgia even.

Neither Vanderbilt nor University of the South showed anything especially good. The same applies to the Mississippi colleges. All of these institutions were represented by possibly a bit better than average teams, yet neither stood out in such a manner as to lay a clear claim for the Southern title.

The season produced several players who give promise of development into stars in later years: in fact, several varsity players of last season, who ended their collegiate courses, have already taken up the game professionally.

Hunt, the star pitcher for the Mercer University nine, was given a try out by the Atlanta Southern League club, but showed a lack of experience. He is expected to get another chance in the 1916 roundup. Hitchcock of Georgia played in the South Atlantic League. He is a pitcher, but his value as a hitter caused his manager to use him regularly as an outfielder.

In addition to these, several others were besieged by offers to turn professional. Cargyle of Alabama has had several offers to join the pro ranks. Harrison of Georgia, probably the best college second baseman developed in the South in recent years, could sign up with several clubs, if he chose to do so. Davidson of Vanderbilt and Hairs-ton of Alabama Poly are others who have repeatedly turned down professional offers.

While college base ball hardly enjoys the popularity in the South that foot ball does, there is still keen interest in certain series on every team's schedule. The Tech-Georgia and Vanderbilt-University of the South games are always good attractions, and the results of these always go a long way toward making or marring the success of these teams' seasons.

Indications are that the 1916 season will develop a number of other strong teams. Many of the stars of the 1915 season are back, and practically every coach has a good nucleus on which to build anew. Suggestions of State college leagues have been made in one or two cases, but it is doubtful whether these materialize.

MISSOURI VALLEY CONFERENCE.

BY GUY S. LOWMAN,

Coach and Director of Athletics, Kansas State Agricultural College.

Five of the seven institutions of the Missouri Valley Conference maintained base ball teams during the season of 1915, namely, Iowa Agricultural College, Kansas State Agricultural College, University of Missouri, University of Kansas, and University of Washington. Weather conditions during the season were such that a great many scheduled conference games were unable to be played, thus making it nearly impossible to determine the relative strength of the teams, although, considering the games played, the teams finished in the following order:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.		Won.	Lost.	P.C.
University of Kansas	6	3	.666	Kan. S. Agri. College	4	4	.500
Univ. of Missouri....	5	5	.500	Iowa Agri. College...	2	9	.182

University of Kansas undoubtedly had the best all round team of the Conference, although Missouri had a fine fielding team and a good pitching staff. The Kansas Agricultural College did not have an opportunity to show its full strength during the season, being "rained" out of a number of games. Three of these Conference games were called off at the very close of the season, when the team was playing its best ball. If all Conference games could have been played, there might have been an opportunity for the college to receive a higher standing. There is no doubt that the University of Missouri would have been a stronger contender for the championship had it been able to play all the games scheduled. The team was going strong at the close of the schedule. The Iowa Agricultural College had a great fielding team, pitching staff, and a team that knew the game, but seemed to be followed by hard luck. In every contest the team would go to pieces at critical times. Rain was a distressing factor in all of the University of Washington contests, every game of the Conference scheduled for that institution being called by Jupiter Pluvius.

COLLEGE BASE BALL IN OHIO.

Ohio University, with one of the best teams in years and a record of nine victories and no defeats in Conference games, was without doubt the champion team of the Ohio Conference. Ohio State, because of having played but three Conference games, is not considered. Closely following Ohio comes Miami, Denison and Ohio Wesleyan, respectively. These institutions were represented by unusually strong teams, and it was not until several hotly contested games were staged that the championship was decided.

Western Reserve and Oberlin were generally considered to be the best of the Northern teams. Wooster, Kenyon and Case played rather below their standard, while Cincinnati, Akron and Wittenberg also had to be satisfied with low ranking.

Outside the Conference, Muskingum, Marietta, Hiram and Capital University were represented by teams which were well above the average and are therefore worthy of note.

College base ball in Ohio is slowly but surely growing in popularity. Better coaching is largely responsible for the increase in attendance, since games of a higher caliber have increased the interest of not only the students, but the city and town followers as well.

CLEVELAND'S PART IN OHIO COLLEGE BASE BALL.

Cleveland can well cry "hard luck" when it comes to talking about Ohio college base ball. Case and Reserve, Cleveland's two colleges, were certainly in that predicament last season.

In the first place, both institutions were counted on to have cracking good teams. Case did have a good team in all except one department of the game—pitching. Her two star pitchers of the year before were hit by the eligibility rule, and an outfielder had to be pressed into service. In hitting, fielding and base running the Scientists were all to the good.

On the other hand, Reserve had a wonderful array of college pitchers, but the fielders did not always accord the proper support. At that, Reserve finished better than even up on its season's schedule, while Case managed to bat out victories in about half of its games. The teams split even in their annual two-game series.

Both teams took a fall out of Oberlin, the latter always being a stumbling block to the Clevelanders in years past. Reserve made a good showing on the Michigan trip, while Case did well against the Michigan "Aggies," but failed miserably in the tilt with the Wolverines.

Ohio Wesleyan had a strong aggregation. Although neither Cleveland team stacked up against Wesleyan, the latter's superiority was generally acknowledged. The team was made up of new material, but soon was molded into a good combination, as was shown by the victories over such teams as Ohio State and Michigan "Aggies." Wesleyan lost to only three Ohio teams, and these games were closely contested. The season was brought to a close by a victory over Ohio State before a large alumni gathering. The feature of this game was a home run over the fence by Third Baseman Knapp. It was the second time the feat had been accomplished in the last ten years.

1, Coach Pat Page, manager of the tour; 2, DesJardien, the 6ft. 5in. pitcher, who won nineteen straight victories; 3, Coach Kono, who has done much in developing the Japanese in base ball, himself a good curve ball pitcher; 4, Hisid, the tallest Japanese, 5ft. 10in., a good left-handed pitcher; 5, Kato, lead-off man, 5ft. 5in., a regular Maroonville at short stop; 6, Cho, a Chinese outfielder, very fast on the bases; 7, "Polly" Gray, captain and outfielder of the Maroon team.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO BASE BALL TEAM WITH THEIR HOSTS, WASEDA UNIVERSITY OF TOKYO, JAPAN, OCTOBER, 1915.

University of Chicago Tour of the Far East, 1915

The trip of the University of Chicago base ball team was, without doubt, the most extensive ever conducted by any group. August 1, 1915, saw the departure of the Chicagoans, and when they returned January 1, 1916, they had covered over 22,000 miles in their five months' sojourn. As guests of the Waseda University of Tokyo, Japan, the Chicagoans were entertained for one month. The following month was spent in China and the Philippine Islands. En route the team stopped over in the Hawaiian Islands. The rest of the time included over fifty days of ocean travel.

The University of Chicago has made a wonderful record in their base ball, having shown superiority over anything in the Orient, yet it will not be many years before the Japanese, Chinese, and Filipinos will be the equals of the Americans on the diamond.

At the invitation of the University of Chicago the leading Japanese University team will be the guests of American colleges this coming May and June. And they will be watched with much interest by the sporting public. It has been predicted in Japan that our national game of base ball will soon crowd out the Japanese national sports of judo, fencing, and wrestling.

The personnel of the Chicago team included such men as Captain "Dolly" Gray, center field, All-Western halfback; P. R. DesJardien, pitcher, former All-America foot ball center; R. H. George, first base, All-Western basket ball star; J. E. Cole and N. G. Hart, catchers; A. H. Rudolph, second base; R. N. McConnell, shortstop; E. D. Cavin, third base; F. A. Catron, center field; E. F. Kixmiller, left field and past foot ball and basket ball man. H. O. Page coached and managed the tour, doing a little pitching.

Other universities that have invaded the Far East have been Washington University, Leland Stanford, California University and the University of Wisconsin.

SPALDING BLACK OIL TEMPERED BATS

No. 100D. These bats are tempered in hot oil and afterwards are treated with a special process which darkens and hardens the surface, and has exactly the same effect as aging from long service. This treatment makes them most desirable for players who keep two or three bats in use continually, as the oil gradually works in and the bats keep improving. Timber used is exactly the same as in our "Players' Autograph," "All Star," "Professional Oil Finish" and Gold Medal lines. . . Each, $1.00

Furnished in any of the following twelve models—Mention model number when ordering

SPALDING PROFESSIONAL IMPROVED OIL FINISH BATS

No. 100P. Improved Oil Finish as used on this line of bats, is the result of exhaustive experiments and tests conducted in our bat factory, with the assistance of some of the greatest professional players. The timber used is identical with that in the "Players' Autograph" and "All Star" models. There is nothing better from which to make them. Each, $1.00

SPALDING CATCHERS' MITTS

No. 11-0

No. 11-0. "The Giant." New model. Heavy brown leather throughout, face specially shaped after leather has been treated with a tanners' preparation, which makes it impervious to moisture and adds to its durability. Leather laced back and special "Stick-on-the-Hand" strap-and-buckle fastening. Each, $10.00

Patented October 28, 1913.

No. 10-0. "World Series." Finest selected brown calfskin throughout. King Patent Felt Padding, hand stitched, arranged so it may be adjusted readily. Patent molded face, leather laced back and special "Stick-on-the-Hand" strap and brass buckle fastening. Each, $9.00

Patented Jan. 2, 1906; March 30, 1909; Oct. 28, 1913 and including King Patent Padding Pat. June 28, 1910.

No. 9-0. "Three-and-Out." Patented Molded Face and hand-formed pocket. Best brown calfskin throughout. We select for the face only that which is perfectly tanned, because of the peculiar stretching and molding process which enables us to produce a "deep pocket," with no seams or rough places. Padded with best hair felt; patent laced back; leather lace; leather strap and brass buckle fastening. Each, $9.00

Patented January 2, 1906.

No. 9-0P. Patent "Perforated" Palm. Otherwise as No. 9-0. 9.00

Patented March 25, 1913.

No. 8-0. "Olympic." Palm is made of the special leather that we put out two seasons ago in our "Broken-In" Basemen's Mitts and Infielders' Gloves. Controlling our own tanning facilities, we have been able to produce a grade of leather prepared so that it "holds the shape," and we have been able to use on this leather a special Preservative, so that no matter how long the mitt is worn and whether in dry weather or wet, the shape remains the same indefinitely. Back and side piece of mitt special brown calfskin. Leather lace. Leather bound edges. Hand stitched, formed padding. Leather strap and brass buckle fastening. Each, $8.00

Patented January 2, 1906.

No. F0. "Foxy." Brown calfskin throughout. Patent combination shaped face, padding of best hair felt and Fox Patent Padding Pocket, so additional padding may be inserted. Extra felt padding with each mitt. Patent laced back and thumb; leather lace. Special "Stick-on-the-Hand" strap-and-buckle fastening. Leather bound edges. Each, $8.00

Patented Jan. 2, 1906; Oct. 28, 1913, and including Fox Patent Padding Pocket, Patented Feb. 20, 1912.

No. 7-0. "Perfection." Brown calfskin throughout. Patent combination shaped face, padding of best hair felt. Patent laced back and thumb; leather lace; leather strap and brass buckle fastening. Heel of hand piece felt lined. Leather bound edges. Each $7.00

Patented January 2, 1906.

No. 6-0. "Collegiate." Molded face. Special olive-colored leather, perfectly tanned to enable us to produce the necessary "pocket" with smooth surface on face. King Patent Felt Padding hand stitched, arranged so amount and position of padding may be adjusted readily; patent laced back and thumb; leather lace; leather strap and brass buckle fastening. Heel of hand piece felt lined. Leather bound edges. Each, $6.00

Patented January 2, 1906; March 30, 1909, including King Patent Padding, Patented June 28, 1910.

All Styles Made in Rights and Lefts.

When Ordering for Left Hand Players Specify "Full Right."

SPALDING INFELDERS' GLOVES

No. VXL

No. VXL. "Just Right." "Broken-In" style. Brown calfskin, specially treated to help player break glove into shape. Full leather lined. Welted seams. Supplied in either regular or "Cadet" fingers. King Patent Padding (Patent June 28, 1910). Each, $5.00

No. SXL. "All-Players." "Broken-In" style. Specially prepared buckskin. Glove needs no breaking in after you purchase it. Simply slip it on and start playing. Finest quality material throughout. Full leather lined. Welted seams. King Patent Padding (Patent June 28, 1910)..... Each, $5.00

No. BB1. "World Series." Finest quality buckskin. Worn by the most successful National and American League infielders during the past season.

It is not only a most carefully constructed glove, but the model, which is of good width and length without being clumsy, is the most popular style we have ever put out. Leather lined throughout. Welted seams. King Patent Felt Padding (Patented June 28, 1910)..... Each, $4.50

No. AA1. "World Series." Finest quality buckskin, specially treated to help player break glove into shape. Very little padding and that in just the right place. Welted seams. Leather lined throughout. One of the most popular models ever made. Regular padding..... Each, $4.50

No. SS. "Leaguer." Made with shorter "Cadet" fingers than in other gloves. Designed by one of the greatest infielders that ever played. We might really call it a special "short-stop" glove, although an all around style and is equally suitable for any infield player. Best quality buckskin, welted seams and leather lined throughout..... Each, $4.50

No. PXL. "Professional." Buckskin used is the finest obtainable. Heavily padded around edges and little finger. Made extra long to protect the wrist. Leather lined throughout. Welted seams. Supplied in regular and "Cadet" fingers..... Each, $4.00

No. RXL. "League Extra." Finest quality black calfskin. Material and workmanship highest quality throughout. General design similar to No. PXL. Full leather lined. Welted seams..... Each, $4.00

An extra piece of felt padding is enclosed with each King Patent Glove.

All the gloves described above are made regularly with Web of Leather between Thumb and First Finger, which can be cut out very easily if not required. All Spalding Infielders' Gloves are made with our Patented Diverted Seam (PATENTED MARCH 10, 1908) between fingers, adding considerably to the durability of the gloves.

STANDARD QUALITY

An article that is universally given the appellation "Standard" is thereby conceded to be the Criterion, to which are compared all other things of a similar nature. For instance, the Gold Dollar of the United States is the standard unit of currency, because it must be certain in its representation of pure gold, and the fact of its being so is guaranteed by the Government. So, too, the word "Standard" in the name of the merchandise we are offering, and that it is so, is a right to be jealously guarded and maintained by a Standard Quality Bureau of Experts. And the law, which punishes persons that attempt to pass a counterfeit coin, Trade-Mark and similar devices to protect their loss against counterfeit products—without the aid of "Government Detectives" or "Public Opinion" to assist them.

Consequently the "Consumer's Protection" against misrepresentation and "inferior quality" rests entirely upon the integrity and responsibility of the "Manufacturer."

A. G. Spalding & Bros. have, by their rigorous attention to "Quality," for forty years, caused their Trade-Mark to become a household name, and the world-wide fame of our goods is due to the fact that we have never sacrificed quality for quantity.

The necessity of upholding the reputation of the Spalding Trade-Mark has caused the Standard Quality in our Athletic Goods, is, therefore, as obvious as is the necessity of the Government in maintaining a Standard Currency.

Thus each consumer is not only insuring himself but also protecting other consumers when he assists a Reliable Manufacturer in upholding his Trade-Mark and all that it stands for. Therefore, we urge all users of our Athletic goods to insist upon maintaining the Spalding Standard of Quality, by insisting that our Trade-Mark be prominently displayed on all products upon which this mark is placed, so that the consumer can best protect his investment in Standard Quality and preventing fraudulent substitution will be ineffectual.

Many years of Standard Quality invariably cause the reputation of being high-priced, and this sentiment is fostered and emphasized by makers of "inferior goods," with whom low prices are the main consideration.

A general comparison of our Athletic Goods, with a comparison to upholds and a guarantee to protect, must secure every good from the consumer, and a comparison of the quality, value and price of our Athletic Goods for Standard Quality depends principally upon the eloquence of the salesman.

We have long experience that there is no quality and more over than their price is in quality—and we avoid this quackery by Standard Quality.

STANDARD POLICY

A Standard Quality must be inseparably linked to a Standard Policy.

Without a Standard Policy, Standard Quality is meaningless. A Manufacturer must have a Standard Policy, because he has given the goods to the public, and must be responsible for the quality of the goods, and for the retail dealer. To meet these conditions of Dual Proofs, the manufacturer is obliged to set a price, which is his price on his goods to the consumer.

In order to give the retailer, when he has his order, to figure out the price of his goods, the retailer and retailer, the retail price is absolutely essential. But when the goods are sold, the price is not set, and when the manufacturer has secured his order from the jobber, and the jobber has secured his order from the retailer.

However, these deceptive high list prices are not fair to the consumer, who does not, and in reality, is not ever expected to pay these fancy list prices.

When the season comes for the sale of such goods, with their high list prices, the retailer begins to make his own calculations, and grappling with the standard of list prices, "priced amounts," which vary with local trade conditions.

Under this system of list pricing, the profits of both the manufacturer and the retailer are lost, but there is no stable maintenance in the prices to the consumer, the keen competition among the local dealer merchants leads to a demoralized cutting of prices by which the profits of the retailer are practically eliminated.

This demoralized system always results in the manufacturer. The jobber must, on his own, and all lower prices. The manufacturer, in his turn, must then demand for the lowering of prices by the consumer, and, in the end, the price and degrading of the quality of his product.

The long-term contract, however, is not to be broken. In 1900, A. G. Spalding & Bros. determined to modify this long-term contract in the Athletic Goods Trade, and to maintain a Standard Quality, "The Spalding Policy."

The "Spalding Policy" eliminates the price-cutting, so far as our Athletic Goods are concerned, and the retail dealer secures the supply of Spalding Athletic Goods direct from the manufacturer, without the aid of a jobber, and is protected from imposition.

The "Spalding Policy" is decidedly for the interest and protection of the users of Athletic Goods and acts in two ways:

FIRST—The user is assured of genuine Official Standard Athletic Goods.

SECOND—As manufacturers, we can proceed with confidence in purchasing at the proper time, the very best raw materials required in the manufacture of our various goods, well ahead of their respective seasons, and this enables us to provide the necessary quantity and absolutely maintain the Spalding Standard of Quality.

All retail dealers handling Spalding Athletic Goods are required to supply consumers with our regular printed catalogue price, and to maintain the same price, and to avoid any discounting and to maintain the same price, and to avoid any discounting.

All Spalding dealers, as well as users of Spalding Athletic Goods, are treated equally, and no special rebates or discriminations are allowed to anyone.

This Policy, in the "Spalding Policy," which has already been in successful operation for the past 17 years, and will be indefinitely continued.

In other words, "The Spalding Policy" is a "square deal" for everybody.
